Poetry.

IN MEMORIAM.

Written on the death of Cora May.

How short the race our Cora run,
Cut down in all her bloom;
The course but yesterday begun,
Now finished in the tomb.

The little chair is empty now,
The little clothes laid by.
A mother's hope, a father's joy,
In death's cold arms doth lie.

To us she was a bud so sweet,
Of promise pure and fair.
Now on the Saviour's breast she blooms—
A flower beyond compare.

Gone the little darling to her home
On yonder blissful Shore
We miss her here, but soon we'll come
To meet and part no more.

Written by M. A. Els-worth, Mars Hill, Maine.

FATE.

BY RUTH WARD KAHN.

One was born in the fiery east,
Where the sun is king,
And knelt each morn and eve in prayer
To that soulless thing.

And one dwelt far in the rosy west,
Where God is love,
And echoed her wishes in earnest prayer
To Him above.

And yet, these two in after years,
While their life was young,
Read in each other's eyes the joyous tale
Which for aye has rung.

One was rolling in wealth and ease
In a grand estate,
Yet sought in vain o'er hill and dale
For his own true mate.

And she, with eyes that watched,
And then with tears grew dim,
Found her grief and her love alike too weak
To point out the way to him.

And many there be who watch through life
For their heart's true mate,
But their search is vain and they die in despair,
And this is fate.

THE HALO.

"One London dealer in birds received, when the fashion was at its height, a single consignment of thirty-two thousand dead humming birds; and another received at one time thirty thousand aquatic birds, and three hundred thousand pairs of wings."

Think what a prodigious
Faces so bright and gay
Just for a hat!
Flowers unvisited, mornings unsung,
Sea-ranges bare of the wings that o'er-swung,
'Bared just for that!

Think of the others, too,
Others and mothers, too,
Bright-eyes in hat!
Hear you no mothers-groan floating in air,
Hear you no little moan—birdlings' despair—
Somewhere for that?

Caught 'mid some mother-work,
Torn by a hunter Turk,
Just for your hat!
Plenty of mother-heart yet in the world,
All the more wings to tear, carefully twirled,
Women want that?

Oh, but the shame of it,
Oh, but the blame of it,
Price of a hat!
Just for a jauntiness brightening the street,
This is your halo, O faces so sweet—
Death, and for that!

Alexander The Great.

No single personality, excepting the carpenter's son of Nazareth, has done so much to make the world of civilization we live in what it is as Alexander of Macedon. He leveled the terrace upon which European history built. Whatever lay within the range of his conquests contributed its part to form that Mediterranean civilization which under Rome's administration, became the basis of European life. What lay beyond was as if on another planet. Alexander checked this eastward march at the Sutlej, and India and China were left in a world of their own, with their own mechanisms for man and society, their own theories of God and the world. Alexander's world, to which we all belong, went on its own separate way until, in these latter days, a new greed of conquest, begotten of commercial ambition, promises at last to level the barriers which through the centuries have stood as monuments to the outmost stations of the Macedonian phalanx, and have divided the world of men in twain.—Professor Benjamin Ide Wheeler in Century.

COOK'S SURE COUGH CURE.

Humorous.

Went Them Several Better.

Fritz Williams, the actor, was sitting one evening in a New York cafe, when two very young men came in. They beckoned condescendingly to a waiter.

"Waiter," said the one, "bring me a chop. Mind it's just right, now. Just mention my name to the cook."

"You may bring me a steak," said the other, just as grandly, "and tell the cook who it is for."

The waiter was half way across the room, which was crowded, when Fritz Williams hailed him.

"Waiter," he drawled, "bring me half a dozen Blue Points, and mention my name to every darned oyster.—Exchange.

Left Handed Troubles.

A man I know gave a dinner at a fashionable restaurant. A man from Minnesota was one of the guests. When the coffee was brought on, the Minnesota man engaged the attention of the waiter.

"I beg your pardon," said he politely, "but I am left handed. Won't you kindly bring me a cap with the handle on the left side?"

"Certainly, sir," replied the waiter and withdrew. A few minutes later he was seen to re enter the dining room and whispered to the head waiter. The head waiter immediately bustled out. Presently he returned. He was visibly distressed as he made his way to the Minnesota man.

"I'm very sorry, sir," he said apologetically, "but we haven't any caps in the house with the handles on the left side. You see," with a brave attempt to preserve the reputation of the house, "you see, sir, we have so little call for them we don't keep them."—Washington Post.

Southern Dialect.

The Southern dialect continues to reveal its quaintness. Mr. Torrey has recorded this Florida dialogue:

"What time might it be?"
"Six o'clock."
"Lan sakes! I didn't know it was so soon as that."
"Soon" in this case probably meant early. He has also put on record the answer of the North Carolinian who was asked if he had been at the World's Fair:

"No. I 'lowed for to went, but I didn't git for to go."

I have lately heard a bit of genuine negro English which may do to go with these examples. A young woman of my acquaintance was visiting at a house where a colored lad was kept as a sort of boy of all work. After she had been there a day she overheard a conversation between the cook and this boy:

"How do you like the company?" asked the cook.
"I like her right well," said the boy.
"Do you think she's pretty?"
"Well," said the lad, "she ain't 'zackly pretty, but she'll dew well 'nough whar dar ain't no better at?"—Boston Transcript.

Buried Alive for two Days.

John Clark, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home in Dodge city, Kansas, is said to have been buried alive for two days. He had been ill with typhoid fever. The doctor in attendance pronounced him dead and he was buried in the soldiers' cemetery with military honors.

Some of his comrades declared that they did not believe that Clark was dead.

One soldier, named Hazen, persisted that Clark had been buried alive, and demanded that his body be taken from the grave. The doctor was recalled and asked what he thought about the case. Hazen insisted that Clark was subject to sinking spells, and with the fever it would be worse.

After consultation it was decided to open the grave. When the coffin was opened it was seen that Clark's hands were not in their former position, and there was moisture upon the glass above his mouth. Stimulants and careful nursing turned the tide for Clark and death was robbed of its victim.

When Clark was finally restored to consciousness he said that he had been half conscious of all that had happened, and knew that he had been buried alive.

"Still, I could not do anything," said the old soldier. "I was helpless, but life did not desert me. It was a awful thought, yet I could not cry out. When I appeared to myself to be dying the experience was a very pleasant one. I seemed to be entirely free from trouble and passed into a new realm."

"When I began to recover I found myself in what seemed to be a coffin, but I at once knew that I was not dead, because my feet were cold and I was hungry. I knew if I were in heaven I would not be hungry and if I were in purgatory my feet would not be cold."

Clark is nearly 70 years old. He was buried on Wednesday and taken out on Friday.

Farming in the Maritime Provinces

Differs materially from farming in Ontario and the West. Conditions are different and our markets not the same. A product profitable in those sections would not pay the tillage here, and a suggestion valuable to a westerner, would prove disastrous if followed by our farmers. In subscribing for an agricultural publication it is well to bear this in mind. There's only one paper that treats of farming from a Maritime Province standpoint. It is the

Dear Sir—My wife has been afflicted with nervous prostration for several years, using every kind of medicine recommended, but obtaining no relief until I procured some of your Pelee Wine, which I am delighted to say, has had the desired effect. It is the greatest tonic of the age, I think too much cannot be said in its praise and no house should be without it. We have recommended it to several suffering from la grippe debility, with like good results.

I am, yours gratefully,
