Poetry.

—QUEENSTOWN.—

Since Bard Anon, has ceased to write
Old Queenstown's noble praise,
I now shall take my pen in hand
And follow in his ways.
The Woodville poet, somehow thought Anon's fair muse disgrace;
But he is now in Lalysmith,
A dwelling with his race.

And now I undertake to tell How Queenstown's projects shine;
I live in ancient castle here,
My name is Ranadine.
And here, alike all other towns,
You find the young and old,
You find the timid and the shy,
You find the gay and bold

All go on Sunday to the Church,
The Sabbath School attend;
They say it is excelled by none,
From county end to end.
The day school too is doing fine,
The Teacher she needs praise,
All shouted (when she said resign),
Your salary we'll raise.

And here in Queenstown she must stay,
Till summer comes again,
The vessels o'er the waters ply,
And wild bear leaves his den.
And oft in Autumn's early morn
A hideous sound we hear;
It is the minrod in the wood,
Slaying the timid deer.

Few from here are in the woods;
And few have gone to war;
The mill still grinds its buckwheat flour,
The miller looks for more.
A saw mill too we also have
As keen as Scotland's thistle,
And all day long you hear her puff,
At morn and eve her whistle.

The evenings here are spent in talk
Of politics and rights;
Of the victories that Blair has won;
And Laurier's bull-pup fights.
But far as voting is concerned
Man knows his own will best,
And when election day rolls round
We'll put them to the test.

RANADINE.

HER REMARKS.

(Francis Elkin Allison in the Interior.)

A throng of women who had served the Lord
Waited before Heaven's gate for their reward.

Each shining soul had her fair record brought
Of glorious service for the Master wrought.

One gentle one, whose life was full and long,
With her great pen had slain a giant wrong

With starving children this one's life was spent;
To nameless outcasts, hope that presence lent.

For dwarfed and stunted souls these labored well,
And left love's blessing in the prison cell.

For poor humanity, sin-cursed and lost,
They gave their lives and counted not the cost.

Oh, they were bright and beautiful to see!
Earth's fame had crowned them ere their souls were free.

But one there was who, lone and trembling stood Among the throng of women great and good,
To whom the recording angel, speaking,
said,
"What doest thou here among the blessed dead

Bearing no record? Hast thou nothing done
On earth where these their crowns of glory won?"

To whom she weeping said, "Let me return
To that dear earth for which I sorely yearn;

The hearts that loved me all my service got;
Not any service for the Lord I wrought.
Life was too short for me; when death had come
I had but made on earth a happy home."

"Ah! sayest thou so, thou well loved and blest!
Daughter of Heaven, go in among the rest.

The hearts that loved thee thou shalt have again;
None may return, but thou shalt lose thy pain.

For thou shalt breathe in Heaven thy native air,
And in its glorious mansions, great and fair,

To thee all familiar joys shall come;
Heaven is what thou hast left, a happy home."

Mrs. Casey and Mrs. Murphy met in a street car and were discussing family affairs.
"And how many children have you Mrs. Murphy?
"Foive. Two livin', two dead and wan in Philadelphay.

MILTON'S PRAYER OF PATIENCE.

I am old and blind!
Men point at me as smitten by God's frown;
Afflicted and deserted of my kind,
Yet am I not cast down.

I am weak, yet strong;
I murmur not that I no longer see;
Poor, old, and helpless, I the more belong
Father Supreme, to Thee.

O merciful One!
When men are farthest, then art Thou most near;
When friends pass by, my weakness t shun,
The chariot I hear.

Thy glorious face
Is leaning towards me and its holy light Shines in upon my lonely dwelling place—
And there is no more night.

On my bended knee,
I recognize Thy purpose clearly shown;
My vision Thou hast dimmed, that I may see Thyself—Thyself alone.

I have nought to fear;
This darkness is the shadow of Thy wing,
Beneath it I am almost sacred,—here
Can come no evil thing.

Oh, I seem to stand Trembling, where foot of mortal ne'er hath been,
Wrapped in the radiance of Thy sinless hand,
Which eye hath never seen.

Visions come and go,— Shapes of resplendent beauty round me throng;
From angel lips I seem to hear the flow
Of soft and holy song.

It is nothing now—
When heaven is ripening on my sightless eyes,
When airs from Paradise refresh my brow,
The earth in darkness lies

In a purer clime.
My being fills with rapture—waves of thought
Roll in upon my spirit—strains sublime
Break over me unsought.

Give me now my lyre!
I feel the stirrings of a gift divine;
Within my bosom glows unearthly fire,
Lit by no skill of mine.

One-Sided Woman.

The woman who gives her entire attention to any one pursuit does so at the risk of spiritual loss to herself; no matter if it is home-making, housekeeping, care of children, business, self cultivation in any form, religion; her relations with life in general are thrown out of the normal, and her power is weakened, says the Pittsburg Despatch. To great development in any direction, to the exclusion of everything else, makes a one-sided character, usually unlovely and unloving.
An all-round experience in life begets love and sympathy for others, and is the very best teacher we can have.

Treatment for Mosquito Bites.

These torments, in some localities, render what might otherwise be a comparatively happy existence, a miserable failure. Some infants and children suffer terribly from the poisonous stings. I once saw a case where an infant three months old received a sting at the outer corner of one eye. The eye closed with the swelling, and suppuration set in; and after careful attention it was healed, but much anxiety was felt about the eye for a time. In spite of careful screening, one will often find its way into the children's room at night, and being unmolested, will do serious damage.

Fortunately all do not suffer to the same extent from the poison, but I have seen a child's hand swelled to twice its natural size from three stings on the hand and wrist. If the bite is fresh, an application of listerine will sometimes neutralize the poison altogether. Applications must be made gently, as rubbing will spread the poison and thus cause a larger swelling and a more inflamed condition.
A thick cream made of ivory soap and applied at once will remove the itching, then as there is no scratching the bite soon disappears. For some serious bites that are some hours old and are "angry" and swollen, make a bath of half a pint of hot water and one teaspoonful of saleratus; bathe gently, as hot as the flesh can stand. Keep it hot and repeat often; if on the hands let the child play in the water and it will soon disappear. Try in every way possible to prevent their becoming stung, and save them the discomfort and suffering. Very often extremely dangerous conditions arise from blood poisoning by these summer pests.
