[TO THE EDITOR OF THE CARLETON SENTINEL.]
A HINT TO THE PROTESTANTS OF CARLETON.

SIR,—Old Scout has again been out on duty, and having nothing to report at Head-quarters, he was marching along the beaten path that partly encircles the last hill that hid his resting place from his eyes, to the tune of slow time, when, upon a sudden, with a private blast, known only to one of his family, he heard the Bugle sound to Arms. Thus started from his midnight revelry, he was about to make "Argumentum ad hominem," when he bethought of his profession, and hurrying through a gate-way to his left, anxiously sought for a secreted spot, where he might cast his wearied limbs and spy some further movements of the enemy. The desired haven presently appeared in a polygonal form, being a new envelope or crib for a recently found spring of water, which in its natural state, is not holy water, but so near it that one with a sling and stone, of inferior qualities to David's could measure the distance. It has been often observed that those that quench their thirst at this spring, cast an eye at the gigantic edifice upon the summit, and with reverential awe proceed practically to beat a remembrance of something either upon their forehead or heart. This place of retreat he had not long occupied, when lo, a ghostly throng; in their front appeared an aged man, of tall and stately mien, clothed in a coat of many colours, bearing in his hand a crucifix of large dimensions. On his frontispiece were painted R. C. B*****; on his sign, Political Warfare for 1850. Their council assembled within hearing. The grave matters then and there discussed must remain with him a secret until you launch your paper ship upon the broad sea of independence. Then back to back with pen in hand, We'll comment upon the well-devised plans of this cross-bearing band.

You will perceive that the last line of my poetry is a hair's breadth too long; just so will this army find the road they intend to travel in the Autumn of 1850.

More of this hereafter.

TOM SCOUT.

TO OUR READERS.

READER we have to perform an unpleasant task this week—one which causes our hand to falter, and our temples to throb, as the hot blood gushes through them at an unnatural speed, while we write, at the dead hour of midnight, when all around are hushed, in slumber, and even nature appears to share the general repose—we have to say farewell to you, at least for a season; how long, depends upon the promptitude with which those who are indebted to us, pay the amounts of our claims against them. For the last eighteen months, reader, we have journeyed pleasantly together, and although during the last six months of that time, we have been much harassed by certain liabilities, yet we have striven to avoid annoying you, by pursuing the common, and we regret to add, necessary, custom among newspaper publishers, of inserting frequent complaints of the remissness of subscribers; we have endeavoured to avoid this, but in sparing others, we have had to stand the brunt ourselves, and we regret to state, that in consequence of not being able to collect the many out-standing debts due for the Carleton Sentinel, we are now obliged to get a friend, from whom we and the public have already received many favours, to perform the editorial duties of the paper, during the ensuing winter, while we go into a foreign country to earn means, by which, in the spring, to discharge in part liabilities of which, if only one half the debts due to us were paid, we should be enabled at once to clear ourselves. We feel humiliated at being obliged to make this statement public—not that we are ashamed of labour, or of again taking the station of a mechanic,—but that we should be compelled to say of our subscribers, that they have placed us in this position, far be it from us to reproach them, we attribute the result, in a great measure, not to a want of desire to pay us, but to a want of thought. Printers' bills, unfortunately, although numerous, are yet small in amount, and scattered over a great extent of country; and to this cause, we attribute a great deal of the loss and injustice they suffer; and we fear there will not be much improvement in this respect, until the Publishers of newspapers in this Province, come to an unanimous determination to trust no individual for more than six months subscription. We have made every provision for our creditors that circumstances would permit, and we think none of them will be dissatisfied, or imagine that we have had the slightest intention to wrong them, nor will they suffer the loss of one farthing, on our account, as our assets when realised, are very much more than sufficient to meet all demands. Those persons who are indebted to us, will perceive by an advertisement in another portion of this sheet, that Messrs. James S. Segee and Charles H. Connell are alone autho-vised to receive all amounts due to us, and we really trust they will now do us the justice, tardy though it may be, of at once calling on those gentlemen, and settling up, as that is the only way in which they can at all atone for the mischief which has been done by, to say the least of it, their negligence. There are many to whom we feel it to be our duty to return our acknowledgments for various kindnesses extended toward us; and our readers generally are entitled to our thanks for having borne with our want of that mature skill and judgment necessary for the proper performance of an Editor's duty, and we can only say that if we have not conducted the paper as well as might be done by older hands, at least we have desired to please you, and we are gratified to find many of our patrons expressing their satisfaction with our attempts. To those friends,—and although an Editor, and but a short time resident here, have some that we believe to be sincere ones,—who may possibly feel a shade of regret at the cause of our leaving, we would say that we trust to meet here with you again, but as life is at all times precarious—and having never possessed a strong constitution, and our health being much impaired by the undue exertions made during the first six months we were engaged in business, in Woodstock, and as the labor we expect to perform during the next six months is not calculated to restore health, ours is peculiarly so—if we meet not with you again, we can only say that our remembrance of, and respect for, you, can only cease with the termination of our life. We hope, however, for brighter days, and we trust that the peculiar circumstances of our case, will convince our non-paying friends of the absolute cruelty of their conduct towards us; they would not serve their shoemaker or their tailor as they have used us, and how can they expect—apart from the physical impossibility of purchasing paper, &c., without the cash—that we can perform anything like mental labour, while harassed almost to madness by the demands of creditors? How can they expect that an Editor can conceive an idea, and clothe that idea with appropriate language, when his brain is stretched to its utmost tension to determine how to pay £10 or £20 out of nothing? Never can the Press exert that beneficial influence in the world that it is capable of doing, without the people determine that they will pay the Printer. In conclusion the subscriber would add, that during his absence the paper will be carried on as usual, and that Dr. Rice has kindly consented to take the management of it, and begs to subscribe himself the reader's very obedient, but ill-paid servant.

WILLIAM HALEY.

The foregoing needs no explanation. And I will only add, that the scarcity of money here, and the difficulty of collecting it when it was due, seemed a sufficient reason for Mr. H. to try and obtain some means by his exertions in his occupation as a printer elsewhere. And by prudence and industry his friends are in hopes he will be able to return by May next and resume his former situation. The remaining partner, Mr. Melvell, whose steady and industrious habits are well known in this village, will, with the aid of the boys in the office, probably be able to carry on the mechanical part of publishing till that time.

They seem anxious to conduct their paper in a respectable manner and disposed to pay their debts, which, by their prospective arrangement they hope to do to the last pound, if those indebted to them will pay the several small amounts which are due.

As I now intend to remain here and attend to the duties of my profession till next Spring, I very cheerfully lend them a helping hand by editing the Sentinel, while two of their other friends will assist them in another department.

C. D. R.

The regular monthly meeting of the Woodstock Total Abstinence Society will be held at Connell's Hall, to-morrow evening, commencing at 7 o'clock.

FOR HAVANA.—The Barque Amelia, 192 tons, Holder, master, cleared at the Custom House yesterday, for Havana, with a cargo, consisting of 4,100 sugar boxes valued at about £400 sterling; pickets, boards, shingles, potatoes, dried fish, smoked herrings, soured salmon and trout, sounds and tongues. Value of the cargo about £730 stg., and shipped by Messrs. Allison & Spurr. It is somewhat cheering in these dull times to see new branches of trade opening to the enterprise of our merchants.—New Brunswicker

VERY LIKE APATHY!!—We copy the following from a late Boston Journal:—

CANADA.—It is stated in military circles in Montreal, that advices by the last steamer are to the effect, that England intends keeping the Canadas, and will not give them up without a struggle. Four regiments, it is said, are under orders for Canada, and that a Military Governor is to relieve Lord Elgin."
