PAPAL INTERFERENCE IN BRITISH NORTH AMERICA.

Our contemporary, the Commercial Advertiser publishes the following singular document, which he says is a literal translation of an article published in the organ of the Papal Government at Rome on the 13th October last. If such an article were really published as stated, the strict censorship of the press in the Papal dominions afford incontrovertible evidence that it contains the sentiments of Pius IX, and bespeaks the determination of "His Holiness" to bring whatever spiritual power he may possess in Canada to bear upon our political institutions and temporal interests. The insolent and mendacious terms of this Papal manifesto are utterly unworthy of serious attention, while the audacious attempt of an Italian priestly potentate—"by the grace of" French bayonets—to interfere with the political relations and institutions of the people of British America, affords abundant evidence that spiritual despotism—Papal infallibility—is absolutely inconsistent and incompatible with political and social freedom, and that excepting, happily for the human race in its power, Rome remains unchanged. It is only physical weakness which restrains it from enforcing its principles as of old, with the rack and the auto de fe!

"The hearts of the faithful have been sorely grieved by a generally credited report, that the eminently religious land of Canada is to be engulfed in the pestilential Colonies of England, in North America. In fact that faithful, pure, and Catholic Canada is to be joined to four Infidel Provinces, belonging to—oh, infamous lie—the Mother (?) Country. In calling England infidel we wrong the Turk and the Hindoo, for they honestly, and without hypocrisy, deny Christ, and his Holy Saints, and decently permit the Apostolic Church to govern itself in their land. But England lyingly calling itself Christian, has been for more than three centuries the accursed enemy of Catholic truth and virtue. The Canadian people are represented to be the purest in life and faith of any of the sons of our Holy Church. Our persecutors, the English even admit their sanctity, charity and purity of life. The Canadians honor and reverence their spiritual directors, never treating them with the insolent familiarity so revoltingly witnessed in the United States; but looking upon them as their true fathers, leading them from earthly simplicity and purity to eternal beatitude in Heaven. The comparison of these religious virtues, with the cold formal, faithless, observance of their heretical rulers has excited English malignity. The Catholic Church has now the whole power in Canada, and there can be no degree of opposition on its part that would not be justifiable against so vile and sacrilegious an attempt to place God's pure children beneath the iron rule of the sons of Hell! In Malta, the English have periled the souls of the faithful by permitting the foulest slanders on the Church of Christ to be published, and when the Catholic Church of that Island passed just and salutary laws approved and counselled by the Holy Chair—necessary to preserve the faith of the people from open insult and pollution that Godless Government (Governo senza Dio) forbid their being carried into effect. Like a pestilence passing through the land, the faithless and profidious sons of Britain carry with them vile heretical books and tracts, which like the seductions of Satan himself are made to seem sweet to the unsuspecting, until vile poison postrates body and soul, to feed Hell with its wretched victims. Canada, faithful Canada must not be lost!"

The following extract from the Gentleman's Magazine will show the decided course adopted by the British Government in a former instance of Grand-Ducal and Popish effrontery:

"While the Rev. Basil Kennet was chaplain to the English factory at Leghorn though they exercised their religion with the utmost caution and privacy, he met with great opposition from the Papists, and was in great danger of the Inquisition. They had given secret orders to apprehend him, and hurry him off to Pisa, and to dispose of him in the severest manner Upon notice of this design, Dr Newton, the English Envoy at Florence, interposed his offices at that Court, but could obtain no other answer than that he might send for the English preacher, and keep him in his own family as his domestic chaplain, otherwise, he must take the consequence; for in religious matters the Court of the inquisition was superior to all civil powers. The Envoy communicated this answer to the Earl of Sunderland, then principal secretary of state for our ever-to-be-remembered Queen Anne the Great. In her majesty's name, he immediately returned the following directions: 'Sir,—Yours of the 16th and 24th I received. In answer to which I have laid the whole affair before her Majesty who has commanded me to order you to tell the Grand Duke and his ministers in her Majesty's name, that if there be any molestation given to her chaplain residing at Leghorn, she shall lock upon it as an affront done to herself and the nation, a breach of the peace and a violation of the law of nations and shall, by her fleets and armies, which will be all the year in the Mediterranean Sea, not only demand, but take satisfaction for any such injury offered; and that the priest of the Grand Duke's Minister here and all frequenters of his chapel must expect the same treatment. And if they talk any more of the Pope or the Court of Rome, you must cut the matter short by telling them her majesty has nothing to do with other independent princes and states. And this you must do in the most forcible manner possible.—SUNDERLAND.' As soon as this letter was communicated by the Envoy to the Grand Duke, the contents were immediately imparted to the Pope and his cardinals who so well understood the argument of fleets and armies, that Mr. Kennet escaped their intended fury, and continued for several years to officiate as a minister of the Church of England, in a large room set apart for a chapel in the Consul's house, with public prayers, and a course of sermons since published to the world."

IS IT POSSIBLE? The statement is contradicted that a yankee has invented a machine to take the noise out of thunder.
