

Missing

Admiral Corry's division of the Channel fleet consisting of ten ships, and including the Prince Regent, 90, Duke of Wellington, 131, St. Jean d'Acre, 101, and London, 90, is ordered to cruise between Queenston and Sicily until the 15th, then to rendezvous at Spithead, where four more ships are to join it.

The Sciele continues very warlike. It speaks now of a project which, it says, is very seriously talked of in England, for the capture by the English and French fleets of all the Russian ships in the Black Sea and the Baltic, and holding them until the Emperor Nicholas shall have ordered his troops to recross the Pruth.

HORRID MURDER.—On Saturday night or Sunday morning, a man of the name of Livingston was most brutally murdered on the Streets of St. Stephen. The particulars, so far as we can hear, are not known here.—Last night, however, a person of the name of Boyle was apprehended here and carried off to St. Stephen to undergo an examination there before the proper tribunal.
