

How SCHOLARS ARE MADE.—Costly apparatus and splendid cabinets have no magical power to make scholars. In all circumstances a man is, under God, the master of his own mind. The Creator has so constituted the human intellect, that it can grow only by its own action, and by its own action it must certainly and necessarily grow. Every man must therefore, in an important sense, educate himself. His books and teachers are but help; the work is his. A man is not educated until he has the ability to summon, in an act of emergency, all his mental powers in vigorous exercise to effect his proposed object. It is not the man who has seen most, or has read most, who can do this; such an one is in danger of being borne down like a beast of burden by an overloaded mass of other men's thoughts. Nor is it the man who can boast merely of native vigor and capacity. The greatest of all the warriors that went to the siege of Troy, had strength, and carried the largest bow; but was greater, because self-discipline had taught him how to bend it.—[Daniel Webster.]

Veils are said to be injurious to the eyes, and the ladies should pause and think of the bad consequences that may result from their use. Curtis, a celebrated scientific writer on human sight, objects in toto to the practice of wearing veils, especially lace veils, as the continuous endeavors of the eye to adjust itself to the ceaseless vibrations of that too common article of ladies' dress results in its serious injury. The hurtful tendency of the custom, if not felt immediately, will sooner or later be made apparent. Some physicians go so far as to ascribe much of the near sightedness of children and adults to the fact that their mothers were in the constant habit of wearing lace veils.

Great effects from little causes flow, as tall oaks from little acorns grow; but we have rarely heard of a more extraordinary illustration of the fact than is seen in the case of Sir Thomas Colby, an English gentleman. It is stated of him that, waking up in the night, he recollected that he had left the key of his wine cellar on the parlor table, and fearing that his servants would improve the inadvertence, and drink some of his wine, he got up and went down stairs after it. He was in a profuse perspiration, which was suddenly checked as he rose and stepped into the colder halls. The check of perspiration threw him into a fit of sickness, which terminated fatally in a few days. His illness was so brief and severe that he could make no will, and his immense property of six millions of dollars was divided among five or six day-labourers, who were his nearest relatives.

It has cost many a man many a hard sweat to get that amount of money, but few have lost so much by getting out of a sweat.

THE COMPLEXION.—Light blue colors are never becoming to persons of dark complexion.

Dresses of pale pink are very becoming to ladies with dark hair, and a fresh or clear complexion.

Dark complexioned persons always look well in pink—unless the countenance be very sallow.

The skin becomes dried and hardened by exposure to the sun, or to a high wind. Sitting near the fire is also injurious to the complexion.

To beautify the skin and to give transparency to the complexion, moderate daily exercise, in the open air, is necessary. Keep the pores open by cleanliness, and give it tone by bathing and gentle friction.

An ounce of scraped horse radish, infused four hours in a pint of cold milk, is a safe cosmetic in cases where the skin requires a gentle stimulant.

PRINTING.—Mr. Knight, one of the most intelligent scientific authorities in England, has given it as his opinion, in a published report, that on the whole, the average work of the French printers is superior to that of the English, as regards the evenness, clearness of impressions. He says the use of improved cylindrical machines has much to do with this. But there is another cause of inferiority not so easily to be overcome. Our paper is inferior, taking the general quality of printing paper. It is not made of so good material as the French, and although, considering the difficulty of obtaining good material, manufacture has been greatly improved, yet an English sheet of paper has not the substance or surface, without which the most careful printing cannot be effective.

GOOD LAW FOR THE GIRLS.—By an ancient act of the good old Scottish parliament, passed in the reign of Margaret, about 1288, it was "ordained that during ye reign of her maist blessed Majestie, ilk maidon ladde of baith high and low estate, shall have liberty to speak ye man she likes: gif he refuses to take her to be his wif, he shall be mulct in the sum of an hundred pundis or less, as his estate may be, except and always gif he can make it appear that he is betrothit to another woman, then he shall be free."

FACETIE.

To hear Gough tell the "druggist" story is worth a quarter any time. The story is a capital one, but it takes the man to tell it. This he does in some such words as these:

"A long, lean, gaunt Yankee entered a drug-store and asked:

"Be you the druggist?"

"Well, I s'pose so; I sell drugs."

"Wall, have you got any of this here scentin' stuff as the gals put on their handke'chers?"

"Oh, yes."

"Wall, our Sal's gine to be married, and she gin me ninnence and told me to invest the hull 'mount in scentin' stuff, so's to make her sweet, if I could find some to suit; so, if you've a mind, I'll jest smell round."

"The Yankee smelled round without being suited until the 'druggist' got tired of him; and, taking down a bottle of hartshorn, said:

"I've got a scentin' stuff that will suit you. A single drop on a handkercher will stay for weeks, and you can't wash it out; but, to get the strength of it, you must take a good big smell."

"Is that so, Mister? Wall, just hold on a minute till I get my breath; and when I say Neow, you put it under my smeller."

"The hartshorn of course knocked the Yankee down, as liquor has done many a man. Do you suppose he got up and smelt again, as the drunkard does? Not he; but, rolling up his sleeves and doubling up his fists, he said:

"You made me smell that tarna' everlastin' stuff, Mister, and now I'll make you smell fire and brimstone!"

"Bridget," said a lady to her servant Bridget Conley,—"who was that man you were talking with so long at the gate last night?"

"Sure no one but me eldest brother, mam," replied Bridget with a flushed cheek.

"Your brother! I didn't know you had a brother. What is his name?"

"Barney Octoolan, mam."

"Indeed how comes it that his name is not the same as yours?"

"Troth mam," replied Bridget, "he has been married once."

It has been said that grain is treated like infants. When the head becomes heavy, it is cradled; and it is generally well thrashed to render it fit for use.

"What is your opinion of the talents of our preacher?" said a gentleman the other day to his friend, as they were wending their way homeward from church. "His sermons are quite original—entirely his own compositions."

"So I should think," rejoined the latter; "nor is the composing his own sermon his only recommendation, he composes his hearers too, for I observed that at least one-third of them were comfortably dozing."

"Wonderful things are done now-a-days," said Mr. Trimmings; "the doctor has given Flack's boy a new lip from his cheek."

"Ah!" said the lady, "many's the time I have known a pair taken from mine, and no very painful operation either!"

The shortest way to raise money for any public purpose (says some cynical dog) is to tax female beauty, and leave every woman to rate her own charms.

"This is an elegant extract," as a witty young author observed, when he assisted a young lady out of a ditch into which she had stepped at a picnic party.

A Down-East editor advises his readers, if they wish to get teeth inserted gratis, to go and steal fruit where his watch-dog is on guard.

Special Notices.

OPINION OF THE PROMINENT DRUGGISTS OF CINCINNATI.—We the undersigned, Druggists of this city, have been acquainted with, and sold for a year or two past, an article of Family Medicine known as Perry Davis' Vegetable Pain Killer, and we would assure the public that in every instance, so far as we know, it has given the best satisfaction to the purchaser. We can recommend it to the public as an article

OF GREAT MERIT AND VIRTUE.

Indeed, we never knew an article of medicine become so deservedly popular in so short a time, which is proved by the fact of its extensive sale, and constantly increasing demand. Signers:

WADE ECKSTEIN & CO., I. & C. REARICK.

Dear Sir: I became your agent without feeling any interest in the medicine, but I soon became very much interested, upon seeing the happy effect it had upon many persons. The increased sales in this State are astonishing. I might have collected any number of certificates of its great power in relieving pain, if I had attended to at the time the cures came under my observation. The least I can say for the Pain Killer is, that it fully answers the purpose for which it is recommended.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY.

RY.—(From the Principal of the Ecclonia, New York, Seminary.—Ecclonia, July 17.—Dr. SETH W. FOWLE.—Dear Sir: From my youth I have been subject to lung complaints. In February last, I took a cold, a cough set in, I expectorated freely, but the mucous raised from the lungs indicated a disease deeply seated. Two or three physicians kindly sent me their medicines, which have been very efficient in curing coughs, but they failed to reach my case. In the latter part of April I left home, intending to travel awhile, and, if possible, escape by that means from present danger. When I reached Buffalo my cough was considerably aggravated. A friend there advised me to try the Balsam of Wild Cherry, but I told him I had swallowed medicine enough. The next day my friend urged me again to try "Doctor Wistar," and at three P. M., I was willing to try anything, for I coughed constantly. I procured a bottle, drank of it, continued taking it from that bottle one week, and when the Balsam was gone my cough and pains were gone, and I have not coughed since. Respectfully yours.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—General debility, low spirits, and nervous irritation, are the inevitable consequences of indigestion. Renovate the stomach, clear the bowels, and regulate the secretions with these wonder working Pills, and the strength returns, the depression ceases, the nerves become calm. This is not theory, but practical truth founded on long years of experience, volumes of testimony, and the concurrent admission of all medical men who have ever witnessed the effects of the remedy. In this country, dyspepsia has heretofore been so common a complaint, that it might almost be termed a "national institution." If, however, dyspepsia, generally, are wise enough to resort to this remedy, the disease will soon be a rarity.

Whatever has been done can be done again; so the afflicted need not sink in spirit, but try at once this simple remedy, which has wrought prodigies of wonder.
