SHOPPING. She stood beside the counter-The day he'll ne'er forget; She thought the muslin dearer Than any she'd seen yet.

He watched her playful fingers The silks and satins toss; The clerk looked quite uneasy, And nodded at the boss.

"Show me some velvet ribbon,. Barege and satin Turk," She said, "I want to purchase," Then gave the goods a jerk; The clerk was all obedience.

He travelled "op his shape," At length with hesitation, She bought a yard of tape.

CHINESE WEDDING CEREMONIES .- On the auspicious day itself I hastened to witness the lady leave her mother's home, about seven o'clock in the evening. She was in the little room, to which her earliest associations had been confined, surrounded by women and matrons (her mother among them,) weeping and wailing. She had trimmed herself, powdered her face, rouged her lips, musked her robes, and, as she could afford them, displayed her finest jewels. Had she been too poor to have jewelry by her, she could readily have supplied herself at the nearest pawnbroker's. At last the bridai chair was at the door, with chair bearers and muvicians. A concourse of spectators stood outside, sin-niang, alias "the new woman."

After the procession was duly arranged, the bride ried out of her father's house, she was lifted over a Coffin Mounting, with a good assortment of Crockery. fringed with tiny tinkling bells, and on her and other articles usually kept for the Country Trade. head she wore a singularly shaped hat, with a veil of beads, &c., that almost covered her face. Every symbol of gaiety was exhibited, identified with their notions of a wedding occasion, when according to their phraseology, "the phoenixes sing in harmony," and compatible with the bridegroom's finan-

The whole retinue hurried on through winding streets lined with staring spectators, preceded by men and boys with torches and crackers. By this time a messenger had announced that the lady was "a-comin'," and all was astir at the bridegroom's where the gates were opened to receive the gaudy banners, pink umbrellas, red boxes, and other pieces of baggage, which heralded the rapid approach | assortment of of the bride. Presently the chair bearers rushed in. Three heavy crackers intimated that the bridal attended by four bridesmaids on foot, in black dress-A singularly dressed mistress of ceremonies came to accost the young bride. As she stepped out of which she had to stride. Her four maids supported future companion-a farce sometimes played at a SONABLE AND FASHIONABLE Chinese wedding, as if to denote extreme modesty on the part of the husband in entering on his new responsibilities.

The couple, on meeting, knelt down, and paid street, their religious devoirs to heaven. Next, a document, with the marriage contract, was publicly and distinctly read. Worship was then paid at the ancestral tablets of the husband's family. After this, the pair was conducted into the bridal chamber. which was immediately crowded with friends and visitors. Here, standing side by side, two cups of wine and syrup, joined by a scarlet thread, were exchanged between the couple. This part of the ceremony was concluded by what is called sahchung, or throwing a plate of various fruits, berries, and confections among the crowd of spectators, who TTAS re-opened a Boot and Shoe Store at the Creek were eager to pick up what they could. STONE'S VEGETABLE LIQUID CATHARTIC. constantly on hand, a large and well-selected stock, got up under the immediate superintendence of the subscriber, THE public do not require to be told that a mild, safe and reliable cathartic, in a liquid form, agreeable to the taste, and one which purges without violence, is a dehave been obliged to resort to the use of those drastic. nauseous, and oftentimes injurious purgatives, such as castor oil, salts, senna, rhubarb, jallop, aloes, gamboge, &c., all of which cause more or less debility, and fail to accomplish the object for which they are taken; on the contrary, they often increase the difficulty, and render the patient less curable. None of these enter into the composition of this invaluable remedy. It is composed of barks, roots and seeds, the medical properties of which are exactly adapted to the cure of those complaints for which it is recommended. By a combination of those properties, the public were put in possession of the most valuable preparation ever produced. This medicine is not intended simply as a cathartic; its value as such is insignificant when compared with its power of purifying the blood from all humors, regulating the action of the bowels, curing Dyspepsia, restoring the appetite, producing a healthy action of the Liver, freeing the stomach from bile, and invigorating and strengthening the whole system.
