BOOKS AND STATIONERY.

Reduction in Price.

As money is scarce, and times very dull, the subscriber finds it necessary to sell Goods at the very smallest profit that will pay expenses; and, as he has a very large stock of English and American Goods to arrive this Fall, and a large stock on hand, he is obliged to sell very low to dispose of them, so as to meet his payments; consequently, from the present time, Goods may be purchased at his store for a trifle over the cost; and, as he always keeps a first-rate article on hand, purchasers can be sure to get the worth of their money, and PROBABLY A LITTLE MORE.

Always on Hand:

Notes Paper, Letter Paper, Foolscap ruled and plain; Envelopes, Wax Ink, Pens, Pencils, Slates; Mem. Books, Ledgers, Journals, Day Books, sets of do. for a small business, very low; Folios, School Paper, Fancy Note and Letter Papers; Envelopes and Note Paper, silver, colored, for weddings, with silver water-marks; Quills, Quills, Music Paper, Music in sheet, half price; School Books of all descriptions, Novels, bound and unbound; Large assortment of Children's Toys Books; 2500 Gilt Books for children; Dictionaries, Histories, Biographies; a large and very cheap assortment of Religious Books and Tracts; Bibles, Prayer Books, Hymn Books, Albums, Books for Christmas and New Year Presents; Poems, Song Books, Little Books and Story Books; a large assortment of Fancy Goods, gold and silver Pens and Pencils, Rubber do., Knives, Inkstands, Paper Cutters, Fancy Pen Wipers, and a thousand other things too numerous to advertise.

CHARLEY'S DEATH.

The wind got up meaning, and blew to a breeze;

I sat with my face closely pressed on the pane;

In a minute or two began to rain,

And put out the sunset-fire in the trees.

In the clouds' black faces broke out dimly

That ran of a sudden up half the sky,

And the team, cutting rats in the grass, went by,

Heavy and dripping with sweet wet hay.

Clutching the straws out and knitting his brow,

Walked Arthur beside it, unsteady of limb;

I stood up in wonder, for following him,

Charley was used to be—where was he now?

"'Tis like him," I said, "to be working thus late!"

I said it but did not believe it was so;

He could not have staid in the meadow to mow,

With rain coming down at so dismal a rate.

"He's bringing the cows home," I choked at that time;

They were luddled close by in a tangle and fret,—

Some pulling the other, some pushing the other,

Some looking ahead with their heads lifted high.

Over the run, over the hilltop, and on through the gloom

My vision ran quick as the lightning could dart;

All at once the blood checked and stood still in my heart;

He was coming as never till then he had come!

Dorne's twain got four work-hounds, I saw through the fall

Of the rain, and the shadows so thick and so dim,

They had taken their coats off and spread them on him,

And that he was lying out straight,—that was all!

EDITORIAL AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

There has been but one Dowell. Biographers do not often succeed in placing before their subject just as he lived and moved in his own day and generation. They place their figure on the canvass fairly enough; the outlines are generally correct; the colors are sufficiently glowing; but touch it as they may, they cannot communicate to the great multitude of readers what the subject was in his own mind, and what he felt and thought.

It is only at an ideal that is presented for the inspection and admiration of posterity. The hero lives: the man dies.

The story of the battle from the lips of the old veteran who bore his part in the charge interests us more than the most brilliant account of the general staff and the movements of his numerous troops.

It is not the man of the past, but the man of the present, who interests us. We want to know what he is now, and how he has changed since he was a boy.
