WOODSTOCK, SATURDAY, MAY 15, 1858.

The people and the press of St. John are awakening to a realizing sense of the fact that a large portion of their trade will be jcopardised by the completion to Woodstock, and so onward to Canada, of the St. Andrews and Quebec Railroad, in the absence of any connection therewith of the city of St. John. Why the commercial men and capitalists of St. John-whose character for energy and foresight in other matters, we believe, has never been questioned-have so long looked on supinely, and, as it would appear, unknowingly to the vigorous prosecution of a work of really such importance to them, without making an effort to save to themselves some of the trade, with the loss of which they were threatened, we cannot understand. We only hope that it is not yet too late for St. John and Fredericton, by some decisive and vigorous effort, to tap the main track at some point above the latter city. We do not profess to know much about the technicalities of railroads, but it appears to us that very little knowledge is requisite to enable any man to come to the conclusion that St. meeting was held in the afternoon of the same day that the route chosen should be the most central, especially if the most central route were cheapest. -that the route which would most completely meet and cover all these terms is via the St. John.

An intercolonial railway must be built; it is manifest destiny. The interest which Canada exald, to submit a resolution to Parliament with reference to the matter ;-bearing the impress of that by John Bedell, Esq., gentleman's great ability and warm interest in the cause, we cannot but entertain high hopes of the result. The more anxious are we for legislation on a railway connection, because such may fairly ment of that splendid object which all colonists should desire-a union of the colonies.

THE CAGLIARI CASE. - Parks, one of the Engineers of the Cagliari, whose misfortune it was to become a victim to Neapolitan tyranny and vindictiveness, has written an account of the treatment received by himself and companion, from which the following is an extract :

"The first proceeding upon arrival at the prison was to unclothe us entirely, and search our clothes and persons, even to the hair on our heads. We were then conducted by a dark passage through a number of massive doors, each of which was unlocked and locked again as we passed, until we arrived at a cell into which eight of us were put .-The bullion in the Bank of England increased This cell was so small that our mattresses placed round the walls were touching each other, we had no chairs but sat on the beds; and the only light was furnished by a window strongly grated, and which we were prevented looking out of, as a sentry (a Swiss mercenary) who pased the courtyard, had orders to shoot any prisoner that might stand at the window. Besides our cell was horribly damp, so that we nearly all suffered from its effects in pains in the legs; and it was so infested by rats that in one night, shortly after our arrival, I caught seven large ones, having made a trap of one wooden tub, which served us for the most necessary stant state of nausea.
