SCATTER THE GERMS OF THE

BEAUTIFUL. Scatter the germs of the beautiful! By the wayside let them fall, That the rose may spring by the cottage gate And the vine on the garden wall; Cover the rough and the rude of earth With a veil of leaves and flowers, And mark with the opening bud and cup The march of summer hours.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful In the holy shrine of home; Let the pure, and the fair, and the graceful there In their loveliest lustre come; Leave not a trace of deformity In the temple of the heart, But gather about its hearth the gems Of Nature and of Art.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful In the temple of our God-The god who started the uplifted sky, And flowered the trampled sod! When He built a temple for himself, And a home for his priestly race, He reared each arch in symmetry, And curved each line in grace.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful In the depths of the human soul; They shall bud and blossom, and bear the fruit While the endless ages roll; Plant with the flowers of charity The portals of the tomb, And the fair and the pure about thy path In Paradise shall bloom.

Select Tale.

Three more years went by, and still Jacques continually added to his store. So scrupulous was he in denying himself every superfluity, that the neighbors whispered how the young Guyot had become a miser. Some did more than whisper, they spoke openly to his mother respecting this peculi arity in her son. Madame Guyot looked very sagacious, and gave mysterious hints about the virtue of sparing one's self to spend on another, glancing as she spoke at Jacques and Madeline, who were just visible to the group of gossips,

Let love be the presumed cause of a man's actions, a woman will hardly ever deem him in the wrong, however extravagant they may be. Even vice in her sight assumes the dignity of virtue, if she can ascribe its committal to the power of love Marseille is a city of fountains, and has a fine So it was with the gossips at whose self-constituted I will show you how ill it used to be supplied with were hoarded by her admirer for her to spend some to divine when one is the dearest of all earthly ob-
