SIR : It is the right of every one, in the enjoymest of our free institutions, to express his opinions openly and unreservedly on subjects concerning the public weal. It is the right of every member our political or personal abuse of any one. My iters of the said John Flanagan, for the purpose of examemarks were strictly to the point, and had not the ining into the state of his affairs, and considering the resolution made pointed allusions to our two representatives, I never would have mentioned their names in the debate ; and I challenge any one who has read my remarks on the question to show that in them is a single word indicative of malice or personal ill-will. The thing is so palpably absurd that it scarcely requires a denial.

Surely I have a right to oppose any measure, politically, without being charged with " malice." best judges, can decide.

in the Council ; but they were minorities of which | I am not ashamed ; and should the same questions come up again, I would take precisely the same course; nor have I ever wished to conceal from the people of this County any of my public acts. It is not long since I was called upon to oppose a resolution of the Board that was tantamount to acknowledging the rights of the majority to tyrannize | you may remember, sir, that I was assailed and bespattered with a torrent of slang and Billingsgate that stunk in the nostrils of every honest man in the county. I was pronounced atterly unfit to represent this parish ; my ignorance and presumption were quite intolerable to some good people, known by a most appropriate name.

The people of Richmond thought very differently, however, and nobly sustained me in the stand which I tock on that question. "A Watchman's" ill natured effusion has not therefore taken me by surprise.
