Woodstock, July 4.

HAYLOCK.

He sleeps the sleep of glory, and for him Stern hearts are sad, and many eyes are dim:

What thought the tardy time that they gave? To grace the warrior, found him in his grave?

The loss was ours—not his: our Haylock needs No vulgar blazon for his deathless deeds.

No plaudits loud, no faint praise truly turned Could make or mar the glory he had earned:

The love of England is a nobler prize Than Senates can decree or Kings devise;

And England's grief a stouter monument Than wealth can build or heraldry invent.

Yes, England loved this warrior, for the felt That in his soul two English virtues dwelt:

Steadfast, yet ardent, prompt but wary, brave To height of daring, yet not daring's slave;

Pious as valiant, hopeful mid despair; Dauntless in danger, vehement in prayer;

Alone in peace or war, one path he trod, His law was duty and his path was God.

Through arduous struggles and with toil severe, His friendship virtue ploughed its slow career, He could not match in pure the carol words Of pardoned enemies, and jealous swords;

Merit, not wealth, when manhood's prime was past, Raised the bold leader to command at last;

And with command came glory. Why recall What lives and burns within his heart of all?

We all remember how he rose—a star— On the thick midnight of a dreadful war,

Rolled back the tide of ruin, and restored The peace of Europe with his single sword.

We all remember how through India's path, Scorch'd by fierce suns, or drenched by tropic rains, O'er steaming swamps by terrible slates o'erlaid, Dauntless and swift the heroic band marched.

No need to count their triumphs, none to tell Of cursed Camperdown, and its hideous well;

Of Lucknow's fate, that trembled on a thread, Of the fierce carnage, and the glorious deed;

When the close battery's tempest surged and sang, And through a lane of fire the avengers sprang,

Spent, but victorious, and the glorious shout For Lucknow's rescue scared the miscreant rout!

Yes, they were saved, but at what deadly cost! The ransom'd life; but what a ransom's lost!

His brain overburdened and his heart o'erfright, The avenger sinks beside the work he wrought.

He lived to save; and, having saved, he'd down Beneath the burden of his great reward.

Leaving to us the treasure of his fame, A noble memory, and a stainless name.

London Daily News.

TO WIVES.

The first inquiry of a woman after marriage should be, "How shall I continue to love?"

How shall I preserve the heart I have won?"

1. Endeavour to make your husband's habitation alluring and delightful to him. Let it be to him a sanctuary to which his heart may always turn from the calamities of life. Make it a refuge from his cares, a shelter from the world, a home not for his person only, but for his heart. He may meet with pleasures in other houses, but let him find pleasure in his own. Should he be dejected, soothe him; should he be silent and thoughtful, do not heedlessly disturb him; should he be studious, favour him with all practicable facilities; or should he be with all practicable facilities, and good humor urge him continually to think, though he may not say it, "This woman is indeed a comfort to me: I cannot but love her, and requite such gentleness and affection as she deserves."

2. Invariably adorn yourself with delicacy and modesty. Those, to a man of refinement, are attractions the most highly captivating; while their opposites never fail to inspire disgust. Let the delicacy and modesty of the bride be always in a great degree supported by the wife.

3. If it be possible, make your husband suppose you think him a good husband, and it will be a strong stimulus to his being so. As long as he thinks he possesses the reputation, he will take some pains to deserve it; but when he has once lost the name, he will be apt to abandon the reality.

4. Cultivate and exhibit with the greatest care and constancy cheerfulness and good humor. They give a beauty to the finest face; and impart charms where charms are not. On the contrary, a gloomy dissatisfied manner is chilling and repulsive to his feelings; he will be very apt to seek elsewhere for those smiles he cannot find in his own house.

5. In the article of dress study your husband's taste. The opinion of others on this subject is but of very little consequence, if he approves.

6. Particularly shun what is vulgar and in ridicule, "certain lectures." When you shut your door at night, endeavor to shut out at the same moment all discord and contention, and look upon your chamber as a retreat from the vexations of the world.

How indecorous, offensive and sinful it is, for a woman to exercise authority over her husband, and to say, "I will not have it so." It shall be as I say! But I trust the number of those who adopt this unbecoming and disgraceful manner, is so small as to render it unnecessary for me to enlarge on the subject.

7. Be careful never to join in a jest and laugh against your husband. Conceal his faults and speak only of his merits. Shun every approach to extravagance. The want of economy has involved millions in misery. Be neat, tidy, orderly, methodical. Rise early, breakfast early, have a place for everything, and everything in its place.

8. Few things please a man more than seeing his wife capable and industrious in the management of her household. A knowledge of cookery, as well as of other domestic duties, is indispensable in a female, and a wife should always endeavor to support with applause the character of the lady and the housewife.

9. Let him be your empire—your world. Let it be the scene of your wishes, your thoughts, your plans, your exertions. Let it be the stage on which the varied character of wife, of mother, and of mistress, you strive to shine. In his shelter, quiet scenes let your heart be centred. Leave to your husband and the task of distinguishing himself by his valour or his talents. Do you seek for fame at home, and let your applause be that of your servants, your children, your husband, your God. If, on the other hand, he does not appreciate these things, he must be a
