DAY WITHOUT A SUN. - Bayard Taylor has at last seen a day without a sun. In his letter to the New York Tribune, dated "Kantokeino, Norweig- by Mr. Robert Brown, and more recently by Mrs. Murphy, an Lapland, Jan. 20th," he gives his experience in next below Mr. Skillen's, Water-street, where he intends that peculiarly pleasant style which commands for to keep on hand a general assortment of his narratives of adventure the attention of thousands of readers :

Coffee, Salæratus, Starch, Mustard, Ginger, altitude somewhat, and I had some doubts whether Candles, Soap, Tobacco, Salt, Cigars, Snuff, and all articles we should succeed in beholding a day of the Polar Winter. The Landaman, however, encouraged us by the assurance that the sun had not yet risen upon his residence, though nearly six weeks had elapsed since his disappearance, but that his return &c., &c., together with some choice CROCKERY and GLASS was now looked for every day, since he had already WARE. began to shine upon the northern hills. By 10 In offering these Goods to the public, the subscriber o'clock it was light enough to read; the southern | would say that they are all of the best description, and sky was a large sea of golden orange, dotted with a few crimson cloud-islands, and we set ourselves to watch with some anxiety the gradual approach of the exiled god. * * The sky increased puff. in brightness as we watched. The orange flushed into rose, and the pale white hills looked even more ghastly against the bar of glowing earmine which fringed the horizon. A few long purple streaks of cloud hung over the sun's palace, and higher up in the vault floated some loose masses tinged with fiery crimson on their lower edges. About halfpast eleven, a pencil of bright red shot up-a signal with the sun uplifted to herald his coming. As it slowly moved westward along the hills, increas- and the United States, selected by himself in person, the ing in-height and brilliancy until it became a long largest assortment of HARDWARE and SADDLERY tongue of flame playing against the streaks of cloud. we were apprehensive that the near disc would rise to view. When the Landaman's clock pointed to 12, its base had been so bright as to shine almost like the sun itself; but after a few breathless moments the unwelcome glow began to fade. We took its bearing with a compass, and after making allowance for the variation, (which is here very slight,) were convinced that it was really past meridian, and the radiance, which was that of morning

An error in Woodstock, Nov. 1, 1856. balancing has been known, I am told, to keep a delegation of clerks from each office at work sometimes through the whole night. A hue and cry was of course made after this £100, as if the old lady in Threadneedle street would be in the Gazette for want of it. Luckily on the Sunday morning a clerk (in the middle of the sermon, I dare say, if the truth were known,) felt a suspicion of the truth dart through his mind quicker than any flash of the telegraph itself. He told the chief cashier on Monday morning that perhaps the mistake might have occurred in packing some boxes of specie for sortment of the West Indies, which had been sent to Southampton for shipment. The suggestion was immediately acted upon. Here was a race-lightning against given. Instantly the wires asked, "Whether such a vessel had left the harbor ?"-" Just weighing cally shouted the electric telegraph. It was done. Blue Warps, &c. &c. "Have upon deck certain boxes marked so and so: weigh them carefully." They were weighed; and onc-the delinquent-was found heavier by just one packet of a hundred sovereigns than it ought to be.
