CARLETON SENTINEL.

Woodstock, Saturday, Dec. 18, 1857.

BREEN THE MURDERER.

Much excitement has prevailed in St. John du-Slavin, and the death of the former. First is the evident unfitness of those who had charge of the gaol and premises-a very old and feeble man, ashands of certain parties, who pampered and feasted them in a most unusual and unbecoming manner; much as possible excluded, and one gentleman who with him through the wicket (not being allowed to rective severity. enter the cell), endeavored, as any Christian would, to give the culprit advice suited to his position, was assailed by the young woman in attendance in coarse and unfeeling language, and told that none of his preaching was wanted there—that Breen had his own spiritual advisers. Then came the tragedy and the developments of the Coroner's Inquest.
