This principle, now for the first time to be worked out in this county, is one of the essentials of Responsible Government. This, the grand feature of our present constitutional form of government, by which the people have, first, the privilege of passing upon those of their representatives who take office in the Government, and, secondly, a controling power over the Government through their representatives in the House. We need not remind the intelligent people of this county of the difference between the position they occupy now and that they occupied some twenty years since, in relation to the Government. Then Governments were made, and officers were appointed, without as much as "by your leave" being said to the people. The Governor formed the body executive, and Downing-street gave it vitality; and the people, who had to foot the bills, whose interests were most deeply involved, were consulted in their wishes and feelings as much as the serfs of Russia, or the slaves of the Southern States, are consulted respecting the interests of those two nations .- Now, however, things are changed,-thanks to our persevering reformers, and to the wise and liberal policy of the parent state, -and the breath of popular favor is the sustaining element by which our Governments exist; and each and every man, possessing the glorious right to vote, has a voice to form, to sustain, or to overthrow such Government.
