By what triffes does not only reputation but happiness hang! The Abbe Barthelemy would long since have anticipated Morse's discovery of the electric telegraph, if he had only thought of a wire thinks of breaking eggs' ends, freighting kites with wires, and connecting distant towns with the same slender metallic thread. But our story tells of a man whose fortunes hung upon a teacup—a brittle object, but the porcelain cup was not the brittlest object concerned, two women's hearts or hands were concerned. Now you are to know that once upon a time not many years ago there lived at Venice a Countess whose name I can't remember, but it ended in "1," you may be sure, for she was a true blooded Italian.
