

Special Agencies for the Sentinel. Mr. JOHN INGRAHAM, St. Andrews. Mr. JAMES A. GRANT, St. Stephen. Messrs. DUBOIS & SOSS, Calais.

The Carleton Sentinel.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1859.

Education.

The St. John Courier, if we remember right, a few weeks since, threw out some suggestions favorable to, and commendatory of a measure for the adoption of the system of direct taxation for the support of schools. In our opinion there is no measure so worthy the attention of our Legislators as this, and we do hope that the coming winter will see an act inaugurated and passed, affirming and establishing the principle. Of course there would be much opposition to the measure. The only Counties, we believe, in which a majority of the people are opposed to the system of direct taxation for schools, are those where no local press has been established; and this fact speaks loudly in praise of the influence for good, in educating the public mind, and enabling it to keep pace with the progressive spirit of the age of the press. We do not think, however, but that some of those Counties even not favored with a press, would vote for the measure alluded to. One thing is, we think, certain—that admitting the principle to be the only correct one; reflecting upon the fact that the future well being of those who must determine the coming destinies of our province depend upon its adoption, it is the duty of those who stand in the position of Legislators, to act for posterity in the matter, and not unduly regard the narrow and ignorant prejudices of the people who oppose it. Much good is being done. Improvement—thanks to the energy and industry of our Chief Superintendent—is manifested in connection with our schools; but still we are far, far behind the times, and still our parish schools are in many instances a disgrace.

We allude not so much to the character and ability of the several teachers, as to the surrounding circumstances which cramp and restrain their best directed efforts; and tend, to some extent at least, to nullify his teaching, and, in some instances, rather to vitiate than improve. We often do feel a blush of shame rising to our cheeks as we behold, in some of our most populous settlements, the school house, the most revolting looking building in the locality. We have read somewhere of a town-meeting having been held, in a certain place, to discuss the propriety of building a new school-house, and the result was that it was determined, instead, to build a new pound and take the old one for a school house. Certainly, even in this fine, prosperous and rich county, many, very many, of our school houses are fit rather for impounding cattle, or fattening swine in, than for a place in which the youthful mind is to have its first and lasting impressions formed.

There can be no excuse offered. There is no reason why the poorest of our settlements should not have a neat, commodious, and thoroughly comfortable school house. The close, confined air in summer; the cold, shivering atmosphere in winter; the rude, uncomfortable seats and desks; the miserable appearance of the school house in general, as now found;—these things are all calculated to sap the constitution; to render the pursuit of knowledge so difficult as to weary and give the mind a distaste for learning; to prevent the development of anything approaching to fine taste, or refined sentiments.

Many of our parish teachers are females, and we have felt that they deserved pity, as we have seen them, displaying in their own persons the evidence of taste, neatness, and refinement, following their onerous employment, when all the surroundings were of a nature the very opposite of what they should be, and of what the teacher is. We wish the Government would adopt some suitable plans of buildings and grounds for parish school houses, and then offer some encouragement to parishes to erect after those models. But this, with other necessary reforms, in connection with this momentous subject would follow in the wake of the system of taxation. It is not necessary here to urge any argument in favor of the principle, because we believe Carleton is willing. The Chief Superintendent has doubtless, in his lectures through the County, enlightened the public mind on the subject; and we are bold to say that he will not receive in any county of the Province a more hearty response to this and other progressive measures in connection with education, than in this Carleton County. It is a startling fact, that while the children in our parishes are so poorly (comparatively speaking) provided with the aids, accessories and facilities for acquiring knowledge, so much money—which, turned into this legitimate and noble channel would work such an immensity of good, building and finishing school houses, laying out grounds, establishing libraries,—now goes out of the country to freight ships with rum and tobacco, which, coming here, tends to unnerve the minds, as they have impoverished the pockets of our people. Oh, that men would learn wisdom.

We have had the pleasure of attending two of those popular and interesting institutions—tea-soirees—during the week, and for courtesies bestowed by the managers of each, we have to express our personal thanks.

The first was on Tuesday afternoon, at FLORENCEVILLE, got up for the purpose of raising the necessary funds for the completion of a very commodious and neat Methodist Chapel, which has been erected and dedicated in his pockets, and was arrested while walking along, apparently quite unincumbered. He admits every thing. It is supposed the cause was jealousy. Both are unmarried men. Clark belongs to Victoria Corner, near Woodstock. His age is about 22.—Head Quarters.

The man referred to as BOWEN is, we learn, Thomas Bowyer, of Victoria Corner.

We are happy to learn that the City Council at Carleton is meeting, voted ten Pounds towards planting ornamental and shade trees along the streets of our City. The sum, to be sure, is small, but as it may be looked upon as the first of a series of annual grants for the same purpose, it ought to be considered a short step in the right direction.—B.

At the recent sitting of the Supreme Court in Rescouche, there were no criminal cases on the Docket. The Sheriff presented Judge Carter, who presided, with a clean Calendar and a pair of white gloves.—Sackville Borderer.

RAILWAY TRAFFIC ON SATURDAY.—We learn that the number of passengers who paid fares on the cars on Saturday last was 7,869, and the receipts were about £490. A pretty good day's work.—Globe.

The handsome sum of £1116 has already been subscribed in Halifax, towards the establishing a "Charles F. Allison Divinity Professorship," in the Wesleyan Academy at Sackville.

The Registrar-General, in his annual report states that during the year 318,194 persons were married, and that 663,071 births, and 429,815 deaths were registered. He estimates that the increase of the population of England and Wales exceeded 966 daily.

near by, and to that the satisfied portion of the crowd were invited, and there were entertained by speeches from several gentlemen.

After the tables were cleared away, the intellectual portion of the repast was brought on. This consisted of music by several ladies and gentlemen, who displayed much taste and talent in their performance, with very excellent accompaniment on the melodeon, by Mrs. H. R. Baird. The music was interspersed by speeches from Rev. Mr. Morse, of Maine, and Rev. D. D. Currie; and still later in the evening, when we were making our way home through the darkness, rain and mud, from Rev. Messrs. Temple and Brown, and W. T. Baird, Esq. The receipts of the occasion were between £40 and £50. With the exception of a certain disconnection which was caused by the rain, the whole affair passed off very satisfactorily. Our greatest regret was that many others, like ourselves, were prevented from taking a survey of the improvements going on in Florenceville (we shall allude to them again), which on a fine day would have been indulged in, and we know with satisfaction.

THE OTHER was on Thursday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, in almost the extreme end of the County, from Florenceville, viz., at Richmond Corner. Here the object of the meeting was of a similar character to the former one, save in the difference of names. It was for the completion of the Presbyterian Church in Richmond.

The building is already finished outside, and presents, in its very commanding position, and with its Venetian blinds, a very neat and inviting appearance. Interiorly it is nearly finished, the object of the tea-meeting being to supply pews for the centre of the house—or so we understand it,—the other internal arrangements being completed.

After the more general features of the occasion, in the way of eating, drinking, and conversation, we got through with, Rev. Mr. Salmon—who, during the whole entertainment was most zealously active in seeing that all were waited upon and attended to,—after having expressed regret at the unaccountable absence of several clergymen whom he expected,—called upon the following gentlemen to speak, who severally responded in short and pointed addresses, viz., R. A. Hay, Esq., Mr. James Savage, Mr. M. Arthur, L. R. Harding, Esq., Mr. Pierce, of Houlton, and the editor of this paper. The speeches were interspersed by music from a choir which kindly came over from Houlton, and added largely to the pleasure of the occasion.

The meeting separated, every one appearing extremely gratified at the manner in which it had been conducted, and having gained largely to their store of happiness from a participation in it. Some 250 or 300 persons were present, and did ample justice to the generous and excellent supply of good things provided by the fair ladies of Richmond, and dispensed by them most graciously.

THE CHIEF SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS, H. FISHER, Esq., is now engaged in a lecturing tour through this County. He has lectured during the week at several places above this, and will be at Jacksonville Corner this evening at 7 o'clock, in the Orange Hall; likewise at Richmond Corner on Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, in the Presbyterian Church. He will likewise address the school teachers of this County at the Mechanics' Institute, in this town, on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. We would call particular attention to the above important announcement, and urge upon all licensed teachers the advisability of giving their attendance.

TENT MEETING.—The services at the Tent Meeting to-morrow (Sabbath) will commence at 11 o'clock, A. M., and 3 and 6 P. M., on which occasions Elder Burnham will preach. The tent has been carefully erected, and rendered impervious to the weather; and with due regard by those who attend to clothing themselves properly, will be quite comfortable.

The Editor of the Halifax Presbyterian Witness, having lately travelled through Cumberland, concluded to take a drive to Sackville, and see the Wesleyan Academies, of which he gives a description as follows:— "Whoever visits Amherst, should go a step farther, and see the Wesleyan Academies at Sackville. The ten miles drive from Amherst to Sackville is most delightful. To the left the Bay of Fundy seethes and surges, a thin mist brooding over its turbid waters however sunny the day. Before you, and far up the right, stretch rich marsh lands, relieved here and there by slightly rising grounds. When you are within five miles of Sackville, you see it loom up in front of you, and largest far among its buildings appear the two Academies. As you approach the village you find that its institutions are of a most imposing and beautiful character. I visited both the Male and Female Academies, and never was better pleased with any institutions in my life. Those in charge seem peculiarly adapted for the situations they fill. The Female Academy is in excellent repair throughout. Here I see that ladies are capable of teaching and learning Greek, Latin, and useful and ornamental Arts. I would feel very safe in recommending to any parent to trust their children to Mr. and Mrs. Allison. A beautiful religious tone pervades education here, but I am assured that every pains is taken to avoid denominational peculiarities. Unfortunately for me, I visited these institutions during vacation. I hope to see them when the hours are full of boys here, and I will then leave further description till then."

We learn by telegraph that a man named Clark was stabbed yesterday afternoon in St. Stephen, with a dirk knife, by a man named BOWEN, which caused almost instant death. The murderer had a loaded pistol in his pocket, and was arrested while walking along, apparently quite unincumbered. He admits every thing. It is supposed the cause was jealousy. Both are unmarried men. Clark belongs to Victoria Corner, near Woodstock. His age is about 22.—Head Quarters.

The man referred to as BOWEN is, we learn, Thomas Bowyer, of Victoria Corner.

We are happy to learn that the City Council at Carleton is meeting, voted ten Pounds towards planting ornamental and shade trees along the streets of our City. The sum, to be sure, is small, but as it may be looked upon as the first of a series of annual grants for the same purpose, it ought to be considered a short step in the right direction.—B.

At the recent sitting of the Supreme Court in Rescouche, there were no criminal cases on the Docket. The Sheriff presented Judge Carter, who presided, with a clean Calendar and a pair of white gloves.—Sackville Borderer.

RAILWAY TRAFFIC ON SATURDAY.—We learn that the number of passengers who paid fares on the cars on Saturday last was 7,869, and the receipts were about £490. A pretty good day's work.—Globe.

The handsome sum of £1116 has already been subscribed in Halifax, towards the establishing a "Charles F. Allison Divinity Professorship," in the Wesleyan Academy at Sackville.

The Registrar-General, in his annual report states that during the year 318,194 persons were married, and that 663,071 births, and 429,815 deaths were registered. He estimates that the increase of the population of England and Wales exceeded 966 daily.

Canada and the Prince.

The over-lordly inhabitants of the two Canadas have been excited, for some time past, with rumors that the heir apparent to the British throne, a promising youth of some eighteen years of age, will visit their pine forests, and study the geology of their rocks. Any stray that can possibly induce the favorable wind that is to waft His Royal Highness to the Canadian haven is eagerly seized, and accordingly we find it gravely stated in the telegraph of yesterday, that "several members of the Royal Household, being passengers in the North Briton, to Quebec, their mission is supposed to have reference to the contemplated visit of the Prince of Wales." But the Canadians, loyal, as they are, and devotedly attached as they have ever shown themselves to the mother country, are not altogether of one mind upon minor points of political economy; and we therefore find that while some veteran enthusiasts of the treaty stripes, are looking forward to a consummation of extra-territorial benefits, that a federation of the provinces, under a vice-regal head, will now be accomplished—others, of the baser sort, are growing and grumbling at the mere idea of such a change, and forget themselves so far as to speak of the Prince's visit in unfriendly, not to say disrespectful language.

It is altogether improbable that the visit of the Prince of Wales to Canada has any political significance. The theory of a federation of the British Provinces, with a Viceroy as their chief, is an exploded fallacy. It could be of no earthly advantage to the Colonies, and its only effect would be to increase their civil expenditure. The sole object of a federation is mutual protection. When a number of states are, singly, weak to guard their own territory from foreign aggression, they enter into a compact of co-partnership, by which all agree to contribute their aid to the general safety and share the expense of a general government. But the British Colonies are not in need of any such defensive union. They have no possible enemy to guard against; and, if they had, the protection of the mother country answers all the purposes of a federation. It does more; it defrays expenses which, in the event of a rebellion, must fall upon the people themselves. One of the strongest and most practical arguments used against the foolish ideas of Canadian annexationists some years ago, was that annexation would increase taxation in the Provinces as long as they were able to enjoy independence under the admirable system of self government now in vogue in the British Colonies. It is not the least of our misfortunes that the world, has doubtless within her limits a sufficient number of dissatisfied spirits—men who are ready to recognize in any temporary misfortune or political mismanagement a sure indication of rottenness at the core. But a very great majority of the people of Canada are perfectly contented with the way in which they live, and such progress and improvements as are necessary, they seek to accomplish in a legal and Constitutional way.

The perfect contentment that exists in the Provinces is thoroughly well known in England; and the Imperial Government of the day would never dream of attempting the overthrow of us with the Canadian people. Vice-Royalty will never be forced upon them without their consent, nor is it likely that they would hesitate to choose between some weak son of the Royal House, and the vigorous, intellectual, and hard-working statesmen, who have hitherto represented Her Majesty in the West India Colonies. The only object of the Prince (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of visiting the Province of Canada (if he makes it) means simply, that as an intelligent youth, he takes an interest in one of the most thriving Colonies of the British Empire. He wishes to see the New World, and to ascend the throne a wiser man than any of his fathers were before him. Nor is it at all probable that he will be in the habit of