REV. MR. GLASS .- While the press, Legislature and Government of this province have been suggesting, devising, and endeavoring to give effect to, a variety of schemes for the promotion of immigration and the settlement of our wild lands, the gentleman steadiness of purpose, in a quiet and unostentatious cheap. spirit, been effecting what as yet at best the press, Legislature and Government have only attempted. Satisfied of the superior character of our lands, seeing in them a field promising ample returns for the expenditure of energy and industry, and mindful of the position of thousands of his countrymen, who at home had no resource for the bettering of their positions, or rising to the dignity of landowners, he threw himself into the work of inducing the emigration of those people to New Brunswick. > The time has gone by when she could impose her conditions; they are condemned by the result; we have tried them and failed: we must now impose found necessary. All politics are judged by the result,-not our private advantage, but the final development. The result of our former weak and temporizing policy in China is that we are outcast Of and at war, at the very time that our trade is greater than ever, and some hundred thousand Chinese are settled in the British dominions. The result on China herself that she is torn to pieces and her population decimated by a wide spread rebellion, and she is driven to immense cost in the idle defence of her barbarous system. As it is only eight weeks since the receipt of the answer to the British ultimatum, it must be some time before the arrival of any important intelligence It is very clear that whatever we hope to gain, we must gain by force alone, and that we shall have to win everything by hard fighting. It is too evident by some painful indications that the Chineso have clever advisers, who know what they are about to do long before the event, and whose interest it is, to keen us as far as possible from Peking. Other heads than' Chinese have laid out the fortifications staked the approaches, and even plated the guns .-With this unseen aid the Chinese strpa:s themselves in assumption and defiance. The reply ton which the British forces will have to act is not addressed directly to the British Minister, but sent to of proceeding in the face of the Treaty. The Chinese refuse altogether to ratify that Treaty at Pekin, and refer us to Per-tang. There is reason to believe that the reference to this place, on our visit te Taku, was an after-thought simply to mislead and bafile us, and that, at the very time we' were sent, directing the soldiers and preventing us from peing informed as to the real state of the case.
