

To Way Office Keepers, Agents and Subscribers.

From disarrangement of our lists, some of our subscribers may not have received their papers properly; and we shall feel obliged if they will send us their names, and we will send them our agents, way office keepers or subscribers would notify us of any such omission.

The Carleton Sentinel.

SATURDAY, JULY 14, 1860.

THE PRINCE.

In St. John and Fredericton the theme of conversation, we are told, which absorbs the attention of everybody, is the coming Prince. The former city is, it seems, not to be honored by a lengthy stay on the part of His Royal Highness, who merely passes through it. Fredericton is to be, as it were, the seat of honor, and there no doubt will be gathered a large representation of the inhabitants from all parts of the province to witness the fête with which Her Majesty's son will be welcomed. We have no doubt Fredericton will on the occasion do honor to the province, as a more beautiful city, in itself, can scarcely be found on the continent, and the people will, we are assured, spare no pains to render the occasion such an one as to leave an impression upon the minds of all the visitors, illustrious and ignoble. We may again ask the question, is Woodstock to be represented, and how? We notice that our Mayor is to be one of the invited guests, and we could not desire a better representation from this Town, still we do think the least the inhabitants could do would be to clothe him with certain representative powers by some formal action; but leaving this more public view of the matter, it is to be heartily desired that as many as possible, not only of the old but of the young should see the Prince, and it occurs to us that at a very trifling expense, a large body of the inhabitants could achieve it, and at the same time have a good time. The getting to Fredericton and back might be achieved by chartering tow-boats. The trip down could be made pleasantly, without question, and the return trip, by having relays of horses secured, need not be very tedious. In Fredericton, with all the hotel capacity and well-known generous hospitality of the inhabitants generally, there will be some difficulty in obtaining quarters by a great many persons. Now why might not Spaulding's big Camp Meeting tent be secured, and the Woodstock visitors take their field beds with them, and erecting their tent in some one of the hundred delightful situations which skirt or overlook the city, have for the time an independent local habitation. At all events we advise all who can go, to go. Having seen the Prince may hereafter be a source of great gratification, while the immediate benefit derivable from the holiday, the relaxation from business and family cares for a time can scarcely be told. In our advertising columns will be found the particulars respecting the grand ball which is to take place in Fredericton on the occasion. At this ball, as at all the various demonstrations, there will be much glitter and exuberance of display, and we may have just cause to regret that the Prince and those statesmen who come with him will not have a better opportunity of judging how poor and yet how rich our country is. They will see all the evidences of wealth in too many cases fictitious evidence. They will see luxurious dwellings, magnificent entertainments, and showy apparel, but they will have but little opportunity of seeing how our sources of wealth are as yet partially developed. How we are as a people living beyond our means, importing above our exports how abundant in our country are the elements of wealth, and how much we need, and how amply such would be repaid, men, women, capital, industry and enterprise.

It is a matter for regret that the Prince of Wales is so brief a visit to this province; but in this as in all other matters Canada is the provinces, and gets all, or the lion's share of the honors; but short as the visit is to be, we hope it will be long enough to enable the Prince and the statesmen who attend him to know us as a distinct province.

TITLES TO BE BESTOWED.—A good deal, comic and serious, has been written, since the announcement of the intended visit of the Prince with reference to the honors likely to be dispensed by him; and the probable recipients of the same. In our opinion if honors are to be conferred and are to be regarded as worth having, and the Government, as we suppose it will, has anything to do in the way of suggesting the parties upon whom they should be conferred. Judge Wilnot should be of the first to be recommended. His claims are indubitably written on the pages of our country's political and social history and need not be repeated.

A considerable amount of space in this issue is occupied unprofitably, by the annual advertisement of sale of Timber Lands, which will be found on the last page, and the prize list of the Carleton County Agricultural Society. We are pleased to find this Society giving evidence of activity, and trust that the effort being put forth will be responded to on the part of our Agricultural and manufacturing friends.

12th or JULY.—The Anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, round which gathers so much of historic interest, passed off very quietly, without any demonstration, so far as this Town is concerned with the exception of a sermon by Rev. Mr. Downey in the Orange Hall. From hither we have not yet heard as to how the loyal Orangemen commemorated the occasion.

The St. John Globe says that the Government advertising patronage has been withdrawn from it, and attributes it to the independent course lately pursued with reference to the "Land Question" and other subjects. We think and hope the Globe must be in error.

The Freeman, we are told, having exhausted all its usual, regular vocabulary of slang and abuse on the Government, has applied the term Brute to Mr. Cannell.

The Journal appears this week under a new Head and Motto. It has entered upon the seventh volume.

The Working Farmer for the current month has arrived. It is a most admirable agricultural paper, and is worthy the patronage of every farmer. Price $1 a year.

It is said that gold has been discovered at Tanager River, Nova Scotia. Much excitement prevails in that Province on account of it, and thousands of people are off to the diggings.

We had a little dash of rain Wednesday night, but not sufficient to benefit very materially the Crops which are suffering from the effects of the long continued drought.

Some of our readers are anxious to know as to the future movements of the Great Eastern, and whether she is coming further east. Some say she will be brought to Portland; we will let our readers know when it is so determined.

Lady Franklin has arrived at New York.

It is said that a plot has recently been discovered, having for its object the assassination of the French Emperor and General Garibaldi, 500,000 and 100,000,000, respectively are the valuations put upon the heads of the illustrious individuals.

For the first time North American Indians appear in the ranks of the British army as regular soldiers, a number of the "Six Nations" tribe having enlisted in Canada.

We had written an article upon the new star which last week arose in the St. Andrews Standard, relating to the university but this with other matter, we are compelled to omit this week.

MURDER IN NEW YORK.—Another tragedy has disgraced New York and two lives have fallen beneath the midnight murderer. Eighteenth Street, third avenue was the scene of the outrage. The following are some of the particulars:—

Mr. John Walton, the man who was first shot, and the only one whose life was sought, and whose murder was premeditated, was a wealthy distiller, and one of the firm of Lang & Walton, owners of the distillery in Eighteenth street, just east of the Post office. Mr. Walton also owned the store No. 93, and No. 20 West Twenty-fifth street, to managing the affairs of which he devoted the greater part of his time. He had a room over his store which was occupied by himself and his cousin, Richard H. Paswell, a young man about 20 years of age.

On Saturday night, after having transacted their business, Mr. Walton and Mr. Paswell left the distillery in Eighteenth street, about 11-12 o'clock, and walked up the north side of Eighteenth street to Third avenue. At this corner they both observed a man leaning against a tree, but paid little attention to him, and walked directly past him. They had proceeded but a few feet, when this unknown man proceeded to turn behind Mr. Walton and discharged a pistol at his head. The slug with which the pistol was loaded, entered Mr. Walton's head just behind the left ear, and with a scarcely audible groan, and without a word, the injured man sank to the pavement. The murderer instantly ran toward Irving street, and thence across Third avenue toward Irving street, and thence across Third avenue toward Irving street, and started in pursuit. A number of persons joined in the chase, vociferating "Murder!" and calling for the police. Foremost in the pursuit was John W. Matthews, a well known railroad contractor, as he followed by another person and Mr. Paswell, who had been pursuing the murderer for a short distance behind them. When the flying murderer was near the corner of Sixteenth street and Irving place, he turned about, and seeing Mr. Matthews very near to him, he having outstripped the others, the murderer drew his pistol and fired at Matthews. The shot took effect in the unfortunate man's breast, and he simply exclaiming, "I'm a dead man!" he sank unconscious to the pavement. The pursuing party soon came up to the dying man, and in the confusion produced by this second murder, all trace of the murderer was lost.

Several policemen who had joined the crowd, one of whom was sufficiently near to catch Mr. Matthews as he fell, endeavored to continue the chase, but were entirely thrown off the track, as none could tell the direction taken by the man who fired the shot. Some of the persons present lifted Mr. Matthews and carried to the drug store at the corner of Sixth street and Irving place, but he died in the arms of the rescuers. Others still endeavored to follow the perpetrator of this double murder, but without avail.

Meantime Mr. Walton had been conveyed to the drug store at the corner of Eighteenth street and Third avenue. He is still lying there, but was wholly unconscious, and never gave utterance to an intelligible word. He was soon removed to Bellevue Hospital, where every attention was paid to him, but without avail, as the unfortunate man died at 8 o'clock on Sunday morning.

Although the name of the murderer was not positively known, yet the circumstances connected with Mr. Walton's domestic relations are such as to leave little doubt as to who were the instigators, if not the actual perpetrators of the deed.

UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY.—In order to convenience the public, and accede to the request of several friends, T. S. Estabrook intends to open his new Saloon for the purpose of taking licensees, at the entrance to the Camp Meeting Ground in Wakefield, on Wednesday, the 11th inst., to remain open during the continuance of the meeting. A rare opportunity will thus be offered for those who desire to have a cheap and good picture of themselves or friends taken.

THE COOLIE MUTINY ON BOARD THE SHIP KITTY SIMPSON.—The following particulars are given of the mutiny on board the Kitty Simpson, at sea, on the 5th March. The mutiny commenced by one of the coolies rushing aft and making desperate efforts to wrench a musket from one of the sentries. As soon as the rash was made he was quickly joined by about thirty other Chinamen, who attempted to force open the main hatch, and the captain was the first to arrive at the scene of trouble, with nothing else in hand than a Malacca cane. He made several blows at the first coolie, who continued to struggle, but was finally overpowered and made prisoner, as was also another coolie. Upon the first rush being made, the captain ordered the foremast to be fired, and the coolies, who were in the main hatch, endeavored to keep the watch below confined there by closing the doors, and it was with much difficulty they made their exit therefrom—in so doing many of them received blows with pieces of wood. Most of them, however, managed to get aft. The seaman on the foremast was attacked by four coolies, being caught by the natives, and was wounded in the thigh.

A seaman (named Pratt) in endeavoring to escape from the deck was severely beaten with landspikes, pieces of firewood, &c. After a few shots were fired down amongst them they retreated aft, and the head of the ship was found three of the coolies over the bows hanging to a rope. Great credit is due to the crew for the coolness and courage they exhibited, and the prompt and attentive manner in which they obeyed the orders issued by the captain. For his officers, for his officers, much blood must have been shed and many lives lost. As soon as the hatch was open and secured, and order restored on deck, the prisoners in custody were brought up, and to each the following punishment was awarded: No. 98, ring leader, 100 lashes; 77, attempt to block the hatch, 100 lashes; 129, barricade, 50 lashes; 50, ring leader, 100 lashes; 209, ring leader, 100 lashes. The above prisoners were then secured in irons on the house on deck, and a guard placed over them.

We are informed, says our contemporary the Morning News, that the Grand Lodge of Freemasons in this Province, have resolved to present an Address to the Prince of Wales. The Prince will be otherwise, according to the rites of the office, therefore, who desire to present addresses must send them to Fredericton, and it is believed they will all be transmitted to his Royal Highness in the legitimate way, viz: through the Government.

CONSECRATION OF CATHOLIC BISHOPS.—We understand that the Papal Bulls have been received by the Bishop of Montreal, and that the Bishop of Montreal, in accordance with the wishes of the Rev. Dr. McIntyre, to the see of Charlottetown, (vacant by the death of Bishop McDonald), and of the Rev. James Rogers, of St. Mary's, to the newly formed see of Chatham, N.B. We believe that the solemn service of the consecration of the two Bishops, according to the rites of the Catholic Church, is appointed to take place in the Cathedral of Charlottetown, on Wednesday the 15th day of August, being the feast of the Assumption of the B. V. M. —Halifax Express.

The artificial production of systems having succeeded on several parts of the coast, the French Government has resolved to employ the system on the coast of the Mediterranean also. At Tancarville, the apparatus invented by M. Coste was submerged a few days ago, and as many as 300,000 oysters which had been brought from Bordeaux, were placed in it. The operation perfectly succeeded, and though the oysters had been several days on board ship, they were quite healthy.

Foreign.

THE NATIVE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND.

[From the London Times Melbourne Correspondent.]

The exciting topics of these colonies at this moment in the native warfare in New Zealand. Its chief island, which is the great singular mountain, Taranaki, where the English settlement of New Plymouth was founded in 1842. This spot has been the battle-field of the two tribes. It was formerly occupied by the Ngai-Awa, now settled at Port Nicholson, of which the late chief, Te Pahi (commonly called E. Pahi), which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the Ngai-Awa and Rangitikei belong, the chief is, however, the late chief, Te Pahi, which is the vocative name) is the living head. He has always been in close friendship with the Europeans, long before the systematic colonization of the island took place in 1840. The Rangitikei tribe, to which the