LOWE'S PATENT

PORTABLE PRINTING PRESS. improvements have been effected upon it, no pains or expense having been spared to make this Press what it is now universally regarded to be — without a rival for CHEAFNESS, SIM-PLICITY, DURABILITY, AND EFFICIENCY! Lowe Press

A distinguishing feature of this Press—and one possessed by no other—is that type may be placed upon any part of the bed, and receive a perfect impression. It is well adapted to all kinds of Printing, and has no superior as a Letter-Copying Press. It does not easily get out of order, and a boy of ten years can work the largest size with ease, and at a rate of 500 impressions an hour, which is about the average rate.

Persons living in country places where there are no printing offices near will find one of these presses a profitable investment, as there is a large profit on the printing of Circulars, Business and Visiting Cards, Bill-Heads, Hamibills, $c. $c.

Those who wish to learn a good trade, and at the same time be laying up money—those who wish to complete their education (for who so intelligent as the printer?)—merchants who wish to advertise their business and at the same time keep their clerks busy—gentlemen who find time hang heavy upon their hands—printers who wish a fast, cheap, and reliable job press—in fact, all who want to improve their condition, will find it invaluable. Printed directions, giving all the particulars as to working the press, with information in regard to printing generally, setting types, &c., will accompany every Press; and a Circular, in pamphlet form, containing other information in regard to the press, will be sent on application to any address without charge.

All those who have our presses with the old-fashioned wooden roller can have them exchanged for those with metal ones, with the other Our presses may be exchanged at any time during twelve months, and other articles sold by us, if not satisfactory, may be returned within thirty days.

THE HARVEST HYMN. God of the rolling year! To thee Our song shall rise, whose bounty pours, In many a goodly gift, with free And liberal hand, our autumn stores; No firstling of cur flock we slay, No soaring clouds of incense rise, But on thy hallowed shrine we lay Our grateful hearts in sacrifice.

Borne on thy breath, the lap of spring Was heaped with many a blooming flower ; And smiling summer joyed to bring The sunshine and the gentle shower; And autumn's rich luxurianae now, The ripening seed, the bursting shell, The golden sheaf and laden bough, The fulness of thy bounty tell.

No menial throng, in princely dome, Here wait a titled lord's behest; But many a fair and peaceful home Hath won thy peaceful dove a guest; No groves of balm or fields adorn: No myrtle shades or orange bowers, But rustling meads of golden corn, And fields of waving green are ours.

Safe in thy care the londscape o'er Our flocks and herds securely stray, No tyrant master claims our store, No ruthless robber rends away ; No flerce volcano's withering shower, No fell simoon, with poisonous breath, Nor burning sun, with baleful power,

And here shall rise our song to thee, Where lengthened vale and pastures lie, And streams go singing wild and free, Beneath a blue and smiling sky; Where ne'er was reared a mortal throne, Where crowned oppressors never trod, Here at the throne of heaven alone, Shall man in reverence bow to God.

Awake thy flery plagues of death.

Select Tale.

ISHMAEL.

A young man, quite jauntily dressed, was walking one day along the muddlest street in the suburbs of Baltimore. Just as he had plunged his foot into the midst of a viscid pool-by comparison with its connected waters, a very Lake Superior-the excla-State-street, Boston. To three or four families boot was cut short by a noise as startling as it was showed a well-formed person to much advantage,with one foot on soild earth, the other buried ankledeep in the centre of the slimy sea-he turned his body half round, and looked eagerly in the direction of the noise. Extending from the street at Manufacture and have for sale all sizes French Burr right angles, was a narrow lane of considerable Some twenty paces from the street, the lane was cut by a stout gate. The post on which this hung, suspended also a smaller gate, which served to give passage through thr fence at the left, to the dooryard of a dwelling. It seemed that a young woman, flew open with such violence that she was prostrated by the concussion. The gate was hung so high that it passed clear over her, and swung back, unobstructed, to the fence. At the same instant, an went; and a little distance benind, a whole herd of cattle came dashing on with the same furious speed and gave forth the discordant sounds which had attracted the attention of the pedestrian. As it afterwards appeared, these were beeves, driven fresh from pasture to the shambles, where the temporary mudness into which the first sight of blood somethe control of their keepers.

times throws these animals had excited them beyond into a dense mass, in which animal could not be there arose a noise made up of the clatter of interlocking horns, and the bellow of rage and distress. There is something fearful at any time in such a display of brute energy. It shocks us as unnatural, to see matter gifted by inseated life with a force which is prodigious and resistless, while reason, ordained the governor of life, is not there. But the youth in the street, as the whole scene broke frantic cattle. It seemed impossible that anything could stay their course, and that, unless it were arrested, naught but a miracle could save the poor woman from being trodden to death under the hoofs of a herd, in which each animal communicated momentum to the rest, but had no power of individual action. He never stopped to weigh probabilities, but bounded up the lane, and stood in the gateway with both arms extended. The foremost of the herd recoiled within ten feet of him; but, although their dread of the human form caused them to resist with all their might, the on-driving force behind was too strong, and the young man; received between the wide spread horns of a stately ox, was pressed, staggering, backwards, till is stood almost over the outstretched body of the girl Then it was, that the front line of cattle, wedged in between the gate posts, formed a living wait the resistance in front was greater than at the sides; the lence to the right gave way; and in the space of time that one might draw a full breath the lane was cleared, and the herd, frightened and scattered, were racing over a twenty-were field.

The rescuer lifted up the fainting, yet not unconscious form of the temale.
