NO. 4.

VOL. XIII.

WOODSTOCK, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1860.

Poetry.

A FAMILY PICTURE. BUT ONE PAIR OF STOCKINGS TO MEND TO-NIGHT. An old wife sits by her bright fireside, Swaying thoughtfully to and fro, In an ancient chair whose cranky craw Told a tale of long ago; When down by her side on the kitchen floor Stood a basket of worsted balls-a score.

The good man dozed o'er the latest news, Till the light of his pipe went out; And unheeded, the kitten with cunning paws, Rolled and tangled the balls about; Yet still sat the wife in the ancient chair, Swaying to and fro in the fire-light glare.

But anon a misty tear-drop came In her eye of taded blue, Then trickled down in a furrow deep, Like a single drop of dew; So deep was the channel-so silent the stream, The good man saw naught but the dimm'd eyebeam.

Yet marvelled he more that the cheerful light Of her eye had weary grown, And marvelled he more at the tangled balls-So he said, in a gentle tone: "I have shared thy joys since our marriage vow. Conceal not from me thy sorrows now."

Then she spoke of the time when the basket there Was filled to the very brim, And now there remained of the goodly pile, But a single pair-for him; "Then wonder not at the dimmed eyelight; There's but one pair of stockings to mend to-night." I can but think of the busy feet.

Whose wrappings were wont to lay In the basket, awaiting the needle's time-Now wandered so far away; How the sprightly steps to a mother dear Unheeded fell on the careless car.

For each empty nook in the basket old. By the hearth there's an empty seat; And I miss the shadows from the wall, And the patter of many feet; 'Tis for this that a tear gathered over my sight, At the one pair of stockings to mend to-night.

'Twas said that far through the forest wild And over the mountains bold. Was a land whose rivers and darkling caves Were gemmed with the fairest gold; Then my first born turned from the caken door, And I knew the shawdows were only four.

Another went forth on the foaming wave And diminished the basket's store-But his feet grew cold-so weary and cold-They'il never be warm any more-And this nook in its emptiness seemeth to me To give forth no voice but the moan of the soa.

Two others have gone towards the setting sun And made them a home in its light, And fairy fingers have taken their share, To mend by the fireside bright; Some other baskets their garments fill-But mine! oh mine is emptier still!

Another-the dearest-the fairest-the best-Was taken by angels away. And clad in a garment that waxeth not old, In a land of continual day. Oh wonder no more at the dimm'd eye-light While I medd one pair of stockings to-night."

Select Tale.

A BAD NAME.

I do not know why, except that I wore a great to Stepchester to write a book, people thought I was

Heedless of all around me, I worked on, day after day, week after week, month after month, and on garden, and if I did not feel exactly as proud as did our great historian, Gibbon, when he completed the Rise and Fall, I nevertheless thanked Heaven, from for such demeanor. Robert smiled, and replied: the bottom of my heart, that the business was at an

Gn the following morning I rose in high spirits. It was as beautiful a day as ever was seen. I had now leisure to admire the flowers that were blooming around me and perfaming the air, and to watch the wanton birds on the wing, chasing each other from bough to bough.

I gave orders for the hair-dresser to be summoned; after a brief delay, he came. He was a tall thin man, with a long red nose, and a very liquorish eye. His manner was so nervous and restless that I was half afraid to trust him to shave me, and I was not a little glad when the operation was over-his hand trembled so violently, and he looked at me in such a strange and terrified fashion. Whilst he was cutting my hair I began talking to him; but all I could extract from him was, 'Yes, sir; O yes, sir; you are quite right, sir.' Even when I asked him a ques tion-for instance, . Have you any idea how far it is from here to Hastings by water?' his only response was conveyed in the words above quoted. 'Yes, sir: O ves, sir; you are quite right, sir.' When this man left the house, the impression on my mind was that he was insane; and I intimated as much to Robert, my man servant; but he only smiled, and remarked, 'He may be, sir, for all

My toilet completed, I sallied forth to mingle with the world. It occurred to me that I would, in the first instance, call at the shops of the tradespeople with whom I dealt (through the agency of my servants), and express to them some few words of compliment. I, of course, took it for granted that they knew my name, and that I was one of their customers.

The butcher's shop was the first that I was passing, and I looked in. 'Good morning, sir,' said I crossing the portal.

The butcher, whose size was about double that mine, eyed me with some concern; and, before replying to my salutation, removed from the block his cleaver, knife and steel, which he had just been using; and then, in a somewhat confused manner, he made his exit through a back door, leaving me in sole possession of the shop. I waited a reasonable time; but finding that the man did not return, I took my departure, perfectly convinced that the indeed, I thought, be a great treat.

My next visit was to the baker's-a very respectable man with a very intelligent countenance. I days, a bold smuugler; but he has now an idependobserved that he, too, was rather uneasy when I ence on which he lives." spoke to him, and to my astonishment, when I casually took up a half-pound weight which was on the counter, he rushed-literally rushed-into the street, and stood on the opposite side thereof. There was but one conclusion at which I could arrive old Mr. Carding, who was still very erect, and whose able practitioner, and a very gentleman like man.

far better than either the butcher or the baker; for with a rapidity and distinctness that astonished me. we entered into conversation upon general matters, he talked to me for at least five minutes. At the I asked him to be seated, and after he had drank a during which I mentioned what had happened on expiration of that time, he asked me, very politely, glass or two of the sherry which I placed before the previous day. The doctor laughed, and said : if not abjectly, to excuse him for a few minutes; him, I came to the point by saying: and, putting on his hat, he took a hasty departure 'I am told you remember the late Lord Erskine?' know that only till the other day, when, by the into the street, and turned the corner. It is, per- 'Remember him well, sir,' was his reply; 'knew merest accident, I became acquainted with the na- again.'

tained but a very indifferent opinion.

after her.

with my heavy walking-stick. To no purpose. I accident that we knew he was not mad.' opened the door of the coffee-room, and looked into the passage. There was no one there. I called 'On one Saturday afternoon he brought down resolved on spending the summer there. struck me as very meaningless.

the thirty-first day of April, I walked into my little few streets of the little town—and summoned my Expensive as travelling was in those days, five of us man servant Robert, to whom I mentioned what had went up to London to hear him speak that speech taken place, asking him if he could possibly account in court, before the judges and the regular sworn

" O, yes sir !" "Then do so," I said to him.

The truth is, sir," he went on to say, " that all that I am your keeper."

"What!" I exclaimed.

" Shout after me !"

'un!' You did not notice them, of course?"

"Yes, sir; all, with only one exception."

"Who may that be?" great case that is coming on for trial." On asking Another time, when he was reading out poetry, Erskine, who used to come down here often, and he was playing at rounders with all the little boys stay for a few days in an old house that stood where on the beach.

To have a conversation with an old man who smuggler, "that at first you all thought that he was could recollect Erskine, and answer my questions mad?" ament that illustrious orator and advocate, would

"His name is Carding, sir. He was, in former self."

"Do you think he would come and see me?" "I am sure he would, sir."

"Then bring him here."

In less than half an hour, Robert returned with taken suddenly ill; and I sent for the doctor, a very namely, that the baker was as mad as the butcher. faculties were in excellent preservation His eye- He came; and, after seeing his patient, and assur-The grocer, into whose shop I next went, behaved sight was good, he was far from deaf, and he spoke ing me that the case was not one of a serious nature,

Opposite to the grocer's shop was that of the used to go by the name of the Rampant Madman. less alarm that you had created. However, I have bookseller and stationer, who had supplied me with Most people were frightened of him, and the mo- taken the liberty of disabusing the minds of the peo- by the arm, pointed into the wood. pens and ink, and other little matters. On enter- there used to make a Bogey of him to frighten their ple of their erroneons idea; and you will find that ing, I found the shop empty; but I saw the book- naughty children. 'I'll send for that mad gentle- when you next pay them a visit, you will meet with around as he spoke. seller and his wife-partners in alarm-staring at man,' they used to say. He stayed in this very a very warm reception, and most probably tendered me through a small glass window. I smiled blandly place where you now are. He never stayed long at unto you the most ample apologies." at them, bowed, and evinced by my manner, that I a time, but he paid us a visit pretty often.' wished to be served. But in vain. The more I 'What did he do, that people thought him mad?' myself more than I did at that little watering place whereupon the bookseller and his wife retired alto- by the hour-sometimes for two hours or three holds, I fancy: inasmuch, as two years ago I was Wondering what on earth the people meant, I at times, that you might hear him a mile off, his garum-when I heard a little girl, of about ten years directed my steps toward the livery-stable keeper's, right arm moving about above his head, and his of age, call out to a younger sister, "Come you where I intended to hire a horse, for the purpose of left hand clenched firmly on his hip. (The old man here, Polly! Dont you see that mad gentleman! taking a canter in some of the quiet lanes in the stood up, and imitated the great orator's attitude.) vicinity. The livery-stable keeper, in the politest "At low water he would go and stand on those manner imaginable-but keeping at a considerable black rocks out yonder and talk, seemingly, to the distance from me-said he did not think that he had waves. When he once began he never stopped till a horse that would suit me, but that he would go it was all over, and I have seen the perspiration and see. He did go. But he did not come back running down his forehead, even in cool weather .again. I then went up the yard, and called out, He never kept his hat on while he was speaking ; 'Ostler!' several times at the top of my voice but as soon as he was done, he would put it on, (rather a loud one), but, as I received no answer, I and sometimes laugh heartily. He used to talk like deemed it useless to remain any longer, and made a man who had something on his mind which he my way to the hotel opposite, where I asked for a could not divulge to his fellow creatures; and vet pint of Canterbury ale. I was served by a very he did not seem to care who heard him speak. pretty and engaging young lady, to whom I desired and several other young men have been within six to pay a modest and dignified compliment. But, or seven yards of him, and although he saw us, he alas! no sooner had she placed the ale before me took no more notice of us than if we had been a than she vanished, and shut the coffee room door parcel of sticks, and went on talking just the same. He had been down here, off and on, for more than When I had drank the ale, I rang the bell. It two years befere it was known that he was the fawas not answered. I then made a noise on the floor mous barrister Erskine, and then it was only by an

aloud, Waiter! There was no reply. I could hear with him a young gentleman, about twenty years of no one; not a sound; the house was seemingly age, who walked about the pier while Mr. Erskine empty. I left a sixpence and a piece of honeysuckle was making a speech out upon the rocks. One of near the empty tankard, and walked away in utter the men on the pier remarked to this young gentle-My watch required regulating; but I could not a pleasant spoken man when he is calm, should be get into the watchmaker's shop, for he had bolted so mad!' Whereupon the young gentleman roared uis door when he saw me approaching. It was the with laughter, and then let the cat out of the bag same at the circulating library, to which institution by saying who his friend was. It was afterwards I was anxious to subscribe, for during the winter I that I and several others then here, but now gone had grown to like this little watering-place, and to their account, came to know him so well. And a right merry gentleman he could be, too. Lord What could be the meaning of the tradespeople's bless us, sir! swift as time flies, it seems only as conduct, was a question I put to myself, over and yesterday that he would come down here, and say over again, on my way to the pier, for I now in- to us, as he made his way to these with his hands in tended hiring a boat for a sail. But the fact was, his breeches pockets, and walking like a sailor (he I coulp not get a boat. Every one of the men to had been in the navy, you know, sir). 'Come along, whom I spoke made some excuse or other for not my lads, and be the jury! I am going to make taking me on the water. One said, that the wind another speech.' And a most beautiful thing it would soon shift, and we should not be able to get was to listen to him. One minute he would make back that night; another told me that his mast was you laugh heartily, and the next minute he'd bring sprung; a third that the paint was not dry inside, the water into your eyes, by the tender way in my uncle was bent upon returning. But I was de- the breaking of wood, and then I was knocked over outstripped his companions in his Canadian gallops; and that I would spoil my clothes. And, what was which he'd allude to a fading flower or a sickly even more provoking still, I found myself surrounded child. There was one case in particular, I rememby at least a score of these amphibious animals, ber. It was an action brought against a Mr. Someheard and seldom left my rooms, but when I retired who listened to all I said with much cagerness, body or other by a lord's eldest son, for carrying off I declared I would take a cruise in it, if some one had fallen on me. The next was the lion, who lay well-regulated delight; princely in his liberality, though upon each face there was a broad grin which his wife. It was most beautiful—as we told him when he asked us how we liked it. Blest if he I retraced my steps to my cottage-men, women, didn't make out as how the defendant was the ill and children avoiding me, as I passed through the used party, and not the man as had lost his wife.

> jury; and such a crowd as there was of lords and gentlemen, to be sure!' 'And did he speak that same speech?' I asked.

the people hereabouts think you are a madman, and things were added; but it was, in the main, just Lari had just proposed turning back, when I saw a what he said, standing out on them rocks youder. There was no silly pride about Mr. Erkskine, sir. the shore, and I bade my companion to help me "It is quite true, sir; and, as neither myself nor As soon as the case was over, and he was coming my wife could disobey your order, we could not tell out of court, his quick eye caught sight of us; and the people who you were and what you were, and up he comes, puts out his hand to each of us, and what you were doing, all they could judge by says, 'What! you here, my lads? Well, follow was what they saw; and sometimes, when you me. And he walks off to an old public house near the from my aim, and on the next instant the canoe have help. were walking about the garden, and talking loud to court called the Chequers, and orders two bottles of yourself, you certainly did look rather queer, sir .- port wine for us; and, while we were drinking it, By at least forty or fifty people have I been asked explained to us as how it were not possible for him if you were harmless. "Harmless? Yes!" I said; to win the day; and that all the effect his speech 'and there's nothing the matter with him-he ain't would have, would be to reduce the damages. He mad." But they only shook their heads at that .- | was mighty pleased to hear himself praised, and I had, at one time, to go round to the parents of seemed just as proud of our approval as of anythe little boys and girls who ran about the streets, body's else. I don't think, sir,' continued the old and prevent them allowing their children to shout man, ' that Mr. Erskine felt any of the fine things he said in his speeches. It was all acting with him; and I'll tell why I think so. One day he was walk-"Yes, sir. After you passed them they would ing along the sands, spouting of poetry out of a destruction itself. He seized the bows of our boat to me." follow in a body, shouting out, 'There goes the mad book-he was learning of it, for he read it over and over again-and while he was doing so he turned "And you mean to tell me,', said I, "that all up his eyes, shook his head, and stretched forth his the people in the place thought me insane and think right hand, in such a way that you might have taken him for a street parson. It was a most serious sort land, that the hippopotamus had not followed us, of poetry. It was something about 'Farewell the having sunk to the bottom probably as soon as he drums and fifes, the banners and the big guns—and had destroyed the canoe. "An old man, sir, who is eighty-nine years of the plumes and the feathers, cocked hats and swords, age. Passing the cottage one morning, when you and the virtuous wars and the fair women-honours, were walking about the garden, the old man said, decorations, and rewards! O, farewell everything! "Folks think your master mad; but I know better, Alas! the poor fellow's occupation's gone!' All for I have listened to him more than twice or thrice, of a sudden, sir, he shuts up the book, claps it unand I have come to the conclusion that he is writing der his arm, whistles a jig, and dances to it, and a book, or else that he is a lawyer working up some remarkably, well too, did he come the double shuffle. him how he came to think that, sir, he said he re- saw him work himself up the tears actually rolled membered Mr. Erskine, afterwards the famous Lord down his cheeks; and not two minutes afterwards

'And did Mr. Erskine know,' I asked the old

'Yes; and was very much amused at it. And it is to be hoped that you will not take offence, be-"Who is the old man? What is he?" I asked. cause the people here had the same opinion of your-

'But, my good sir,' I remarked, 'they are still laboring under the impression.'

in a day or so.'

'I hope you will not be offended, but do you

haps, needless for me to state that I did not see any him long before he was the great man that he be- ture of your avocation, I, too, shared the opinion of more of my grocer, of whose sanity I then enter came. He was about nine or ten years my senior. the inhabitants of the town? Yesterday evening For a long time no one knew who he was, and he I heard of your peregrinations, and of the ground-smiled, the more solemn became the expression of "Do, sir? Why, he would stand at the very during the ensuing summer. But amongst some of eyes burn; I could see his long tail sweep the grass. their coutenances. Becoming impatient, I scowled, edge of the cliff where the flag-staff now is, and talk the rising generation the original impression still hours together; and so loud would he speak walking down one of the back streets-meditans nu-

ADVENTURE WITH A LION.

It was a warm, pleasant evening in November, your knife out in case of need.' and our ship was off the coast of Tripoli. A party

'I think you have travelled across the desert?' said one of our number, addressing the captain. ' Not exactly.' replied Captain Bushwick. Some years ago I spent a few months in Abysinia, and the country south of it.'

'Ah-you've heard of that scrape, then?'

'Only that you had such an adventure, captain. Your mate told me that you had met the animal.' 'Well, I have; and if you would like to hear the yarn, I will tell it.'

notion to travel among the African natives. I had with that unearthly purring growl, hardly percepan uncle living in Mocha, engaged in trade there, man, 'What a pity that such a fine man, and such and I had gone out to see him. He was going into don't tremble, then you are made of sterner stuff monstrated not only that his natural qualities are Abysinia on business, and I accompanied him. Our than I am. party consisted of six-my uncle, and self, and four and fearless, having lived with my relative several of a vice. He was upon his right knee, with his ted by the viands and other articles of diet on which years. When business was over, I proposed that left foot braced before him, and his long spear which he has been reared. The intellectual regimen should after a deal of persuasion my uncle consented to the bushes.

On the seventh day, we reached a large lake upon both fish and fowl in this region, but our luck was moderate, much more so than we had expected, and termined to have a few more trials. The only boat we had been able to find was a small canoe, fashioned from a log, and one morning The first thing I saw was Lari, for he it was who Terpsichore who were witnesses of his boyish but would accompany me. The canoe would not carry only a few feet off, with the head of the spear buried he always did the right thing at the proper time, all four of the Nubians offered to go. I was obliged youngest of the lot, but the brightest, and the most said Lari, as he regained his feet. 'If the shaft had United States of America, where a regard for the rifle and pistol, while Lari took his rifle and spear; sent him twent, leet of you, he's a heavy one to lift. and thus equipped we set out. The canoe was easily managed while we kept our proper places, and all went on finely until afternoon. It was very warm and sultry, and I had removed my pistol belt, 'Yes. In parts it was a little different, and some and laid it in the bottom of the boat with my rifle. large flock of birds settle down npon a tree close to wanted a shot at them himself. We had come to within a dozen fathoms of the shore, when a quick, loud cry from Lari startled me struck upon some hard substance.

'A rock' I queried. A hippopotamus!' the Nubian shouted, springing Hardly had the words escaped his lips, before the huge black head was lifted above the gunwales, and as I cast my eyes over into the water, I saw the whole body of the monster. It was as large as an high. We took off his skin very carefull, and magnitude, and then resume their former brilliancy. elephant, but ten times more hideous in looks. Its mouth was opened to the distance of three feet, or more, and its teeth, all of a foot in length, looked thinking of the time when it looked terrible enough through a powerful telescope, are resolved into two in his capacious jaws, and crushed it like an eggshell. With all the force I could muster, I leaped into the water and struck out for the shore of twelve or fifteen miles from the camp, and must foot it back the best way we could. could have followed the shore the task would been easy enough, but this we could not do, for a deep, dark swamp, overgrown with reeds and bushes and gnarled trees, lay between us and our tent, were two knives and Lari's spear. The latter he rifles and pistols were at the bottom of the lake, bade my companion to take the lead, and he did so.

For three hours we trudged on through a thick matted forest, and at the end of that time we reach- Augier, Administrateur .- Paris, Sept. 29. ed a wide expanse of rocky desert. There were clumps of bushes scattered over the place, but they the lake must lie in that direction. By the time we On the following morning Robert's wife was afterwards, just as the dark shadow spread over the whole width of the plain, the Nubian uttered a low ' hist,' and placed his hand upon my arm.

'Do you hear anything?' he asked me. I listened a moment, and told him, yes- Perhaps they are coming after us.' Who are they?' said he.

'Our party,' I answered.

'That fellow walks on four feet, and has a weight

I did so, and could now plainly distinguish the tread of some heavy animal.

'Is it a lion, do you think?' I asked. Lari hesitated a moment, and then grasping me

'Look !- see there !' he cried, whirling me half I did look - and I saw a sight -a sight that made my heart leap. Not a rifle !-not a pistol !-and Reader, such was the case! and I never enjoyed yet there-not twenty yards distant-was a huge Nubian lion crawling towards us. I could see his and I could see that he was advancing for a spring. 'He's hungry,' said Lari, 'or he wouldn't be coming on in that way.' 'Then he'll attack us,' I suggested.

' Of course he will.' ' And not a weapon for defence!'

'I have my spear,' returned Lari. 'Now, back of these bushes-quick-and let him come. Have ing upon your streets shall aspire to a seat in Con-

I hardly knew what my companion meant, but I of us who sat upon the quarter deck, had been con- saw, just upon our left, a clump of bushes, bearing conversing upon various subjects concerning the a small, red berry. They were not over four feet National Legislature; that you, fathers and mothers, high, and occupied a space some eight by four feet can point to me with pride and exultation, and say wide. When we had gained a position behind them. "Look what my boy has done! He makes almost I looked for the lion. He stopped as he saw us take as good a representative as that model and excellent this covert, but we were not hidden from his sight; man we sent there twenty years ago, Jim Rollins as there were openings in the foliage through which of Boone.' [Laughter.] both parties could obtain a view of each other. We are gone,' said I, trembling with fear, as I lented young man; but he dont want to go to Con-Was it there you had your adventure with the saw the huge monster settle upon his belly and move gress. I do: That is the difference. He is young

'Perhaps not,' whispered Lari, without taking In the meantime, I should advise him to get married, his eye from the lion. 'Keep still-don't move, for Come over to Boone, John, and pluck one of the

' Perhaps nothing ; wait, and see,' A vote was immediately and unanimously carried, yet it was a season of terrible suspense to me. I you can go and boast and say, "You must not beat that Captain Bushwick have permission to relate am not a coward, nor was I ever one; but come to me this time. Before, when you beat me, I was no his adventure; and without further preliminaries, be situated as I was there, with a full grown non body out old soll the beautiful flowers that may wither and die if you before you—not twenty yards off—and only a little beautiful flowers that may wither and die if you patch of bushes for an apology for a shelter, through | don't choose me on this occasion." [Laughter.] 'It is now five and twenty years since I took the which the heast could watch every movement, and tible in tone, but making the air tremble with its NING Post."-The triumphant manner in which intensity-have all this, as I had it then, and if you young Albert Edward has passed this ordeal has de-

Nubian servants. These Nubians were faithful right, and I saw that he was as calm as a rock .-- most enlarged sense, is a result. We do not look His great brown eye was fixed upon the lion with a for its illustration in detail any more than we exservants, and long tried, and were, moreover, strong burning gaze, and his teeth were set like the jaws pect that a man's physical vigour shall be estimawe should take a trip to the southward and see the he held with a firm grasp, had the end of its shaft be apparent in the masculine, yet polished, bearing set against the hard ground behind him, with the of its subject. In this sense, we repeat, the young country. The Nubians were anxious to go, and the sharp steel head elevated just to the top of the Prince who has just left our shores carries with him and as he turned I saw the lion cautiously advan- credit of those who have moulded him; that not one the extreme southern border of Abysinia, where we stopped and gathered himself for a spring. I saw part of the courtesies of life, or of the slightest discing upon his belly. When about five yards he single instance has been recorded of a breach on his pitched our tent and then went to hunting for game. his huge paws settle into the ground, and I saw his play of unbecoming temper to any one. His cc-We had been informed that we should find plenty of great shaggy head start upwards as he left his couch. meanour throughout has completely realized the fair With my heart as still as death, I bowed my head flower of the state. Cheerful, affable, modest and and sank down toward the earth. I heard a shock quiet, he has nevertheless exhibited all the manly -a momentary struggle-a crashing sound, as of qualities of a cavalier. A superb horseman, he by a heavy body coming in contact with my right a good shot, he bagged more prairie chickens than shoulder. With a powerful effort I struggled from the messieures of his suite; enthusiastic in the ballbeneath the weight, and gained my feet.

more than two of us with any degree of safety, and deep in his throat, the shaft being broken off about and lett everywhere, where humble service was remidway. He was roaring with a deep, hoarse, sound, quired, striking proofs of a thoughtful munificence. and tearing the dirt up with his claws. to make my own selection. So I took Lari, the 'I think that it found his heart before it broke,' toria been held in such profound respect as in the cool and brave in the presence of danger. I took my held, I'e have pinned him through the heart, and virtues which adorn the female character rises parasent him twenty feet over behind us. But I tell mount to all political prejudice. We did not be-

> 'You must have had a good aim,' said I. 'But 'twas a good mark,' replied Lari. When I saw him coming, I just turned the point right for It was all very simple, and may have been very paddle in that direction. He did not object, for he easily done; but I assure you, a man must have a pretty steady nerve to do it effectually.

stop to take his skin off, for it was very nearly dark. So we resolved to wait until morning, and then

When we reached the lower corner of the waste, we saw a glimmering of water through the trees. and upon pushing our way down, we were lucky second, is fourteen years in reaching us; from the and found the lion just as we had left him. His and yet it will be remembered these are among the when I reached home I had it stuffed and set up .- Others, after vanishing for a season, suddenly re-It looks very innocent now, as my children pat it appear: these are called periodical stars. Many never swam faster, though I found when I reached England :-- "Gentlemen, the high importance that but there is generally reason for supposing that the We were now in a quandary. We had come all you to be present at the practice of the Tir National four by the telescope. Many of the binary stars are Erancais, which the government has allowed to be tinged with complimentary colors. The larger one carried on near the chateau of Vincennes. As sol- is orange colored, the smaller blue; or the one is diers of the two great nations, who have achieved red and the other green. Some of the single-stars are have glory in fighting together on far-off shores in favour of blood-red appearance, but there are none that exof civilization and of huntanity, let us unite, gen- hibit deep tinges of blue or green. The size of sevtlemen, on the peaceful field where skill alone will eral of the fixed stars have been calculated approxitriumph; where victory will excite emulation with- mately. Their diameters are found to be enormous out disturbing that harmony which ought to exist -in one case no less than 20,000,000 miles. Sirius, so we must strike up into the wood upon the higher between two peoples destined to appreciate and es- the "dog star," if set in the place of our sun, would land, and make the best of it. Our only weapons teem each other. We hope that English riflemen look one hundred and twenty-five times as large as and sportsmen will feel a pleasure in answering to he. our call, and they will, by their presence, add to had grasped as he started from the boat, but the the splendour of this international fete. The prizes offered amount to more than 50,000 francs (£2,000). The Tir National Francais will open on the 7th October inst., and will last twelve days. Receive gentlemen, &c. (by order of the committee). J. F.

"HE MEANS WELL ENOUGH."-Oh, no doubt; but the question is, why don't he behave as well as looked dry and parched, Here we took an observa- he means? What is the use of a man's being so odd tion, and finally decided to keep down upon the and eccentric that nobody knows what to make of right hand side of the rocky plain, knowing that him, unless he has an apoligist and an interpreter and singular as it may seem, it is stated that the like you always at hand to explain? Isn't it just as 'Very true,' he rejoined; 'but it will be all right had passed over half the length of the barren waste, lite, as to be morose and surly? And does not a cheap, in the long run, to be good-natured and pothe sun was just behind the trees. A little while man feel better in his own secret heart, when he is conscious of being the former, than he does when the shrinking and uncertain air of those who are obliged to approach him, proclaim that he is the latter? Certainly it does, for our thoughts are always busy sitting in judgment on our selves. Any ed to see how the fool would act." man who carries such a bearing that a timid person, or no woman can approach him without dread, she was making porridge. does not need to be told from without that he is no gentleman. He knows it perfectly well. He is not yet reclaimed from the savage state.

Keep a low sail at the commencement of life; yo equal to all the men we have left behind. Hark may raise with honor, but you cannot recede without

A MISSOURI STUMP SPRECH .- Our readers have doubtless heard a great many stump speeches, read some others so have we: But we have lately read one which savors more of the stump speech in its style than any we have had the pleasure of reading lately. It was delivered by Mr. Rollins, a candia date for Congress in Missouri. He gives an extract as a sample. He thus advocates his claims. "I do think you ought to come forward and give me a lift upon this occasion. I want you to do as the old lady advised her hen to do when she set her on fifty eggs rather more than she could comfortably cover. She spread her wings and put her down carefully, and says she, "Now, d-n you, spread yourself! [Läughter] That is what I want you to

"In conclusion; gentlemen, I have to say that f elected, 1 will try my best to serve you upon all questions wherein you are interested; and upon all questions where I know your will, I shall pay proper respect to it, and your interests shall be safely guarded in my hands. I willendeavor, gentlemen, to make you a model representative, so that in after time, when one of those bright-eyed boys now playgress, and many of us shall have passed that bourne

From whence no traveler returns,

Mr. Anderson is a promising young man; a teyet, and he can afford to wait eight or ten years .fair flowers from our beautiful prairies, and trans-· But what can you do with that spear?' I port it over here in soil of Pike and Marion. There let it grow and blossom, and after awhile let the young blossoms gather around you, as they have I did wait; and though it was but a few moments gathered around me to the number of nine, and then

A "FIRST-RATE NOTICE" FROM THE N. Y. "EVEexcellent, but that he has been subjected to a most Once I cast my eye upon Lari, who was at my excellent system of training. Education, in its indubitable evidence of a rare and judicious culti-" Hist!" he uttered, gathering himself for an effort; vation. It is infinitely to his honour and to the room, he was the admiration of all the votaries of

In no part of the civilized world has Queen Vica lieve it possible that the British sovereign could The monster was dead in a few minutes, and we have increased the admiration with which she then held an examination. The lance-head had everywhere regarded in the New World. But the entered the lower part of the throat, directly be- bearing of her son has proved that we had not taken tween the fore shoulders, and gone clean through the full measure of her worth. The Queen has governed her family as admirably as she has governed her kingdom and of the heir to the British crown we may now say, with propriety ? "England did never own so sweet a hope."

THE FIXED STARS .- The distance of the fixed stars according to modern astronomical calculations, are absolutely incredible. None of thom can be less We could not move the lion then, nor could we than 19,200,000,000 miles from the earth, while the greater part are far more remote. The recent improvements in telescopes have enabled astronomers to compute the distance of nine of the nearest stars. Sirius, the brightest of them; is found to be so far off, that light with a velocity of 192,000 miles a enough to find ourselves only a few rods from the North star it is over forty-eight years. The mind is tent. On the next morning we all went out together lost in trying to comprehend such mighty distances : body measured from the end of his nose to the inser- nearest stars. Several remarkable facts are worthy tion of his tail, eight feet and nine inches; and of note in connection with the fixed stars. Some of when standing, he must have been nearly five feet them was for a time, so as to be classed in lower with their hands; but I never look at it without stars-at least several thousand-when viewed stars, one of which is generally much fainter than the other; these are known as binary or double A Courteous Challenge.—The committee of the stars. In some cases the faint one may only appear Tir National Français have issued the following ad- to be near the bright one from lying in the same didress to the volunteer riflemen and sportsmen of rection, and really be millions of miles behind it; you justly attach to the establishment of national fainter luminary revolves about the brighter one in ifle matches in England, and the remarkable skill obedience to that same great law of gravitation which your marksmen have displayed in these con- which prevails in our own system. Some stars, aptests, have inspired us with the desire of inviting parently single, are resolved into three, and even > INTEMPERANCE .- According to a carefully prepared article in the Psychological Journal, the amount of mortality among persons of intemperate habits, from twenty to thirty years of age, is five times greater than the community generally; and, from thirty to forty years of age, the mortality is four times greater, and the writer adds, " If there be anything in the usages of society calculated to destroy life, the most powerful is certainly the inordinate use of strong drink," The diseases incurred by such habits are mostly of the head and stomach : diseases of the respiratory organs are only about two thirds as much, which affords an argument for drinking whiskey to prevent consumption.

'Mother' said Jemima Spray to her venerable maternal relative, 'Sam Flint wants to come courting me to-night.' 'Well, you jade, what did you tell him?' 'O I told him he might come; I want-

'Stirring times!' as the Scotch lass said when The girl who succeeds in winning the true love of a true man makes herself a lucky hit, and is herself a lucky miss. A miser grows rich by seeming poor; an extravagant man grows poor by seeming rich.