The Deputy Treasurer's balances of the previous year had nearly all been paid up, and outstanding balances now were those of last year, and those had been greatly reduced since the 31st October. Mr. Tilleyadmitted the difficulty that stood in the way of retrenchment; he defended his placing the $120,000 Bank credit among the eash resources, showing that on a former occasion the balance of a Bank credit had been put down as cash resources, and that, if it was found the Commercial Bank and the Bank of New Bruns- the public interests, if not held on a political tenwick, were only $90,000, while a short time ago ure. the amount due the Commercial Bank alone was over $109,000. This showed the fluctuating nature of the account. Mr. Tilley referred to various other matters, bringing in the supply of figures; he said that the Government had managed the affairs of the country with the same economy that they would their own private affairs, and they could account for every dollar of the expenditure.
