THE DEATH OF STONEWALL JACKSON.

The Richmond Enquirer of the 13th instant publishes the following account of the circumstances under which Stonewall Jackson was wounded: "General Jackson having gone some distance in front of the line of skirmishers on Saturday evening, was returning about 8 o'clock, attended by his age since his commencement in business, would respect staff and part of his couriers. The cavalcade was fully inform them that he has just received his in the darkness of the night mistaken for a body of the enemy's cavalry, and fired upon by a regiment of his own corps. He was struck by three balls, one through the left arm, two inches below the shoulder joint, shattering the bone and severing the chief artery; another ball passed through the same arm between the elbow and the wrist, making its exit through the palm of the hand; a third ball entered the palm of his right hand about its middle, passing through, and broke two bones. He was wounded on the plank road about fifty yards in ad- passed by no other establishment in the County, and at vance of the enemy. He fell from his horse, and prices to suit the present commercial crisis. A perwas caught by Captain Wormley, to whom he remarked, 'All my wounds are by my own men.' He had given orders to fire at anything coming up the road, before he left the lines. The enemy's skirmishers appeared ahead of him, and he turned to ride back. Just then some one cried out, 'cavalry charge!' and immediately the regiment fired. The whole party broke forward to ride through our line to escape the fire. Captain Boswell was killed, and carried through the line by his horse, and fell among our own men. Colonel Couchfield, Chief of Staff, was wounded by his side. Two couriers were killed. escaped uninjured. General Jackson was immediately placed on a litter and started for the rear

The firing attracted the attention of the enemy, and was resumed by both lines. One litter-bearer was shot down, and the General fell from the shoulders of the men. receiving a severe contusion, adding to the injury of the arm, and injuring his side severely. The enemy's fire of artillery on this point was terrible. General Jackson was left for five minutes, until the fire slackened, then placed in an ambulance, and carried to the field hospital at Wilderness Run. He lost a large amount of blood, and at one time told Dr. McGuire be thought be was dying, and would have bled to death, but a tourniquet was immediately applied. For two hours he was near pulseless from the shock. As he was being carried from the field, frequent inquiries were made by the soldiers, 'Who have you there?' Drs. Black, Coleman, Wails and McGuire, and amputation was decided upon. He was asked, . If we find amputation necessary shall it be done at once?" He replied, 'Yes, certainly, Dr. McGuire-do for me whatever you think is right.' The operation was performed while he was under the influence of chloroform, and was borne well. He slept on Sunday morning, was cheerful, and every way doing well. He sent for Mrs. Jackson, asked minutely about the battle, spoke cheerfully of the result, and that they have now commenced to sell all descriptions of said: 'If I had not been wounded, or had an hour more of daylight, I would have cut off the enemy from the road to the United States Ford, and we would have had them entirely surrounded, and they would have been obliged to surrender or cut their FIRST QUALITY way out.
