Those buds of life so fair, Ere yet they deigned to bloom, Death comes with greed and hasty steps, And hides them in the tomb. Those forms, whose parents hearts, Their fondest hopes have stayed, This summons called from hence away, And caused those hopes to fade. Mourn not, their spirits gone, Though bright their short career, Though blighted are those radiant joys,

Which seemed your way to cheer. Called by a voice away, A voice of heavenly love, Behold the buds that grew on earth, Blooms in the heavens above. Then mourn not parents for your boys, "Twas God called them away, But live, that you may meet with joy,

On the great judgment day. On Tuesday, 10th inst., at the residence of his mother, William H. English, son of the late Richard English, Esq. aged 32 years.
