The Council vs. The Railway. On next Tuesday the Council of this Mun. cipality meets. The most important matter to come under its notice is the Railway Bill passed at the late session of the Legislature. While there is a vast amount of responsibility attached to the Bill, the duty of the Councillors and their share of the responsibility need be but very light. While they may entertain different views with regard to the general question at issue, and while they may properly and profitably discuss for their own information, and for the information of their constituents, the importance of the railroad, the only decision which we apprehend they will be called upon to arrive at will be, first as to which section of the Bill they consider most desirable to adopt, and second to make the necessary arrangements for allowing the people an opportunity of giving expression to their opinion at an early day upon the subject. This can easily be done, by appointing a day for each Pa- April he went to a justice of the peace named Carleton, in room of A. N.
