I saw John's secret at once, and have profited by it. I never had so few insects in the spring, and I give the pigs credit for it. In turning the orchard into pasture, put in pigsnot landspikes, with snouts like levers. You might loose trees as well as insects in that case. But well bred animals, with judicious snouts, will root in a subdued and Christian like manner .- [Am. Agriculturist.

Comes.—A very remote antiquity is claimed for the comb, which is of Egyptian origin. At first it was made of wood and ivory, but it was used for adjusting rather than for fastening the hair-a pin or bodkin being employed for the latter purpose. The Greeks and Romans, who dressed their hair with great care, used combs of boxwood, iron and bronze; the precious metals were also required in their ma- have formed a Co-Partnership for the purpose of nufacture, as we may infer from the golden transacting a general business at ones ascribed to their goddesses; but in no instance do we find either shell or horn ones mentioned in the classics. The use of the comb in cutting the hair is referred to by Plautus (B.C. 184) From specimens found at Pompeii, it (exactly similar to our small-tooth combs,) were in use at a very early period. The comb of the middle ages exhibits much curious elaboration, with but little improvement in utility. At a later period gold and silver were exter sively employed in their manufacture, and are constantly Manufacturing every description pearls were also added. The comb was thus of made an elegant part of the coiffeur. It was much used in public, for in Killigrew's play of the Parson's Wedding (A.D. 1663,) among the stage directions for a group of gallants, we large stock of Syrups, in Lemon, Pine Apple, Winfind 'they comb their hair and talk'—a practice that continued till the reign of Queen Rates.
