COME AGAIN. Summer, come again to earth,

Let me see thy sunny bloom; Let the crimson rose have birth, Winter chills me with its gloom. Show the beauty on the wold, Virgin spring will quickly wane: Give the flowers their hues of gold,

Let thy sunshine flood the lane. Wake again the humming bee, Toiling 'mong the honeyed flowers; In my dreams I hear and see, Once again thy murmuring showers. Let me see thee gild the hill,

Warmly in the valley glow;

Watch thy sparkles on the rill, Where the red, red roses blow. Whisper round the cowslip's bells, Let thy odours round me swim; As I view from leafy dells, Cloudlets shade the sun's white rim. Perfumed chestnut blossoms bring, Dewy morns and skies of blue,

When with birds the woodlands ring; Vernal heavens of sun and dew ! Send the purple hearted June, With its flushed and mellow eyes! Earth in thy warm kisses shines, Quaffs thy cool delicious showers,

At thy touch she laughs in flowers! Like a lover, unto thee I am looking day by day, Waiting once again to see Blossom-dowered, laughing May. Sunny Queen of balmy hours, Give again the flowers their hue;

For thy gentle coming pines,

Select Tale.

Pearl them with thy glittering showers,

And with coronets of dew!
