Our Railway.

There can be no greater relief, mentally an physically, to those whose business confines them day after day to the narrow limits of a close room in a crowded city or town, then a drive into the country. To those of our townspeople who desire a day's recreation, and who can appreciate the beautiful in nature, as well as the grand in art we safely say, you will be amply repaid by a drive to and a walk over the Woodstock Rail way. The scenery along the whole route is in fact of the most captivating character, while the nature of the work being done is of such a kind as to impress the mind with its vastness, and to energy with which all connected therewith have pushed the road forward to its present stage.-There are now two hundred men, with a pro portionate number of horses, at work, and additions to this force are being made constantly .-The excavation at the Bedell Brook has already reached a length of 1000 feet, averaging in depth 15 feet; leaving only some 600 feet more of a cut remaining, and as the rock has disappeared, the finishing of this cut is, comparatively, a light work. There is another quite heavy rock cutting, just below where the track crosses the Hodgson road for the first time, but Wheaton and Murray, with a strong crew, are making rapid progress through it. Next to these two heavy cuttings, or even, perhaps, first in importance, is the huge fill at Bedell Brook. This is, indeed, a vast work. Prosentation of Address to Hon. On the 22nd of May last, at her residence in Greenfield, Parish of Wicklow, Mary, the beloved wife of James Mackay. Sister Mackay made a profession o Williams, and united with the branch of the Baptist Church of Centreville at Greenfield, and remained a consistent member until death. She was sick for over two years, during which time she enjoyed much of the $6,868,128 love of Christ in her soul, and felt to rely upon his promises. Her end was peace. She was a native of Ireland. She was in the fiftieth year of her age. Just before she died, when her speech had nearly failed her, 182 miles she was longing to depart, and repeated part of that beautiful hymn: Oh! when shall I see Jesus And reign with him above, And from that flowing fountain Drink everlasting love. When shall I be delivered From this vain world of sin, And with my blest Redeemer, Drink endless pleasures in. Christian Visitor please copy.
