SUMMER'S FAREWELL.

Hover has made Medicine the study of his life, What sound is that? 'Tis Summer's farewell During the past few years he has had the The chill breeze comes like a sorrowing dirge, That wails o'er the dead and the dying tems. He has also been in a position The sapless leaves are eddying round. The flowers have fallen and faded. All that I look on but saddens my heart To think that the lovely so soon should depart.

Yet why should I sigh? other Summer's will come Joys like the past one bringing ; The forest will put forth it's "honors" again The rose be as sweet in its breathing. The woodbine will climb round the lattice pane As wild and rich in its wreathing. The hives will have honey, the bees will hum; Other flowers will spring, other Summer's come They will, they will; but ah! who can tell

Whether I may live on till their coming? This spirit may sleep too soundly then To wake with the warbling or humming. This cheek, now pale, may be paler far When the Summer sun next is glowing The cherished rays may gild with light The grass on my grave-turf growing.

The patent laws are useful, inasmuch as they protect the fruits of genius and the result of mental toil, very frequently on the part of obscure and poor persons, from being monopolised and adopted to their own benefit by the rich. While probably the result in the long run is in favor of mind, the contest in the present between mind and wealth is a hard one, and the latter is likely to reap all present advantages. Therefore it is manifestly just that the produce of an important invention or improvement should be so protected as that those who may choose to trade in the result of his labor or derive benefit from it should renumerate him directly for it. The only argument that can be used, it seems to us, in favor of the present Canadian restriction is that it enables the eitizens of that Province to borrow and appropriate without leave or license the invention for which the inventor in the United States has taken out and paid for a patent. Our New Brunswick policy is, we think, the best. Let any man who produces a good thing be protected in its "copy right" on the payment of the smallest possible amount sufficient to cover the expen-
