he dake and his party had managed to clude the dogs and senceal himself from view. George Rez, the enptain of the hunt, now called to a boy at a little distance, and told him to mount his horse and ride to ascertain what was wing on in the rear. It is right, however, here to remark that Middle Erf is intersected by a marrow road, each side of which is thickly every rews with fine bush. Along this road the bey had to proceed, but he had not gone far he fae fine bush when we saw him returning at full speed with the elephant after him, in hot parsuit. The monster which has great speed when he chooses to use it, was evidently gainag on the horse, while the boy, ealling out in Dutch, " Fire, fire ; for God's sake fire, or shall be killed," rode for protection towards the dake's party, and galloped round their flank. From that the elephant did not slacken his prec. | sheap if not cheaper than can be parchased elsewhere. ber with cars and tail erect he rushed on right In the direction of the dake, who was standing to add expense to the debt, which he will be obliged to add expense to the debt, which he will be obliged to add expense to the debt, which he will be obliged to add expense to the debt, which he will be obliged to the debt, which he will be obliged to the debt, which he will be obliged to de unless paid before the first day of March next.

STOVEST very peculiar in the way the elephant advanced. It did not look like either a tret or a gallop, but more resembling the gliding motion of a ship in smooth water, as if the immense monster were bearing down under a press of sail before

It has been put into the Cape papers the the dake went on his knees to fire, but nothing of the kind eccurred. He coolly took his large SHAMPOSING RALOON from the hand of young Atkinson, who had been carrying it for him, and did not pull a trigger until the elephant was within less than twenty yards. He then discharged both barthe in quick ancession, sending one bullet inthe animals bard in the sending one bullet into the animals head just above the right eye, and the hitting him with a second bullet a little lower down, between the trunk and the root particular eare given to Camina Children's Hair Coy's BRICK BUILDING, Particular eare given to Camina Children's Hair continues. of the right task. No one could possibly have been more steady and deliberate than the duke was when he fired, and it was fortunate for himself that he was able to display such plack ; for be alleved the elephant to get so close that if he had been at all nervous, and his aim less mase, his eva life and the life of some of those at his side would inevitably have been sacrificed As seen as the elephant received the duke's two bullets he stopped in his career, shook his head, and recled round, presenting his broad olde; he then staggered a few yards further, and when he was in the act of falling some of the others fired ; but these shots were superflueds, the duke had given the poor brute his pricetes, and he would have died on the spot If not a second gun had been discharged .-The elephant measured 10ft. in height, 24ft. from the top of the trunk to the tip of the tail, and 17ft. round the body.
