LITTLE WIFE.

When the fire was burning brightly,

Little wife of mine,

But our life has brighter grown, love,

You have spared me much, much sorrow, Little wife of mine!

I have worked and scorned to borrow,

Sweet, you've saved me sin and sorrow, Little wife of mine!

Saving money 'gainst the morrow;

I am stronger, dear, if older,

Little wife of mine,

Little wife of mine

For your dear head on my shoulder,

Makes me feel, God knows, the bolder;

Hair grows gray-love grows not older,

VANITY. The sun comes up and the sun goes down,

And the day and the night are the same

The year grows green and the year gro

And a hundred ships are the same as one,

The fisherman droppeth his net in the stream,

And a maiden dreameth her love-lit dream,

And what is it all, when all is done?

The net of the fisher the burden breaks,

And after dreaming, the dreamer wakes.

The Presbyter says that in Chicago this season tion of Sabbath breaking. Several houses are in process of building all Sunday, quite openly. The Directors of the Northwestern and Pacific Railroad started on an excursion over their line in their palace cars ignoring the Sabbath and the scruples of the Christain ladies and gentlemen among their guests, as they habitually tramkeeping at work on Sunday, in full view of the hundred churches of Chicago. There are now over 10,000 men at work in the city every Sabbath. The worst feature of the case is, that a very large proportion of the railroad owners are Christains, at least church members. There is hardly a Sabbath-breaking railroad in the land without Christain stockholders and even directors. Churches will suspend the stoker or conductors who run on Sabbath—why do they keep silence toward his master, the stockholder and director, who compels him to sin,
