Lord Lovell and his Velocipede.

A NEW VERSION.

Lord Lovell be soed by the garden gate With his shining velocipede, And whispered farewell to his Lady Bell Who wished for his Lordship good speed. When will you be back. Lord Lovell?" she said But he gave to her question no heed-Placed his feet in his stirrups, and galloped away On his famous velocipede.

Then Lady Bell cried, in frantic alarm, "What a monster my Lord is, indeed, To ride thus away, from his loving young wife, On that horrid vlocipede?" Lord Lovell returned, broken-hearted and sore

And Will was a steady, sensible young man, with a stout heart and broad shoulders, with her parlor very nicely furnished." which to pash his way in the world.

They brought into this mutual partnership, together with the wealth of loving hearts and strong, helpful hands, a little of worldly gear. Will's consisted of a new and pretty cottage, every stitch of which was laid with his own hands-fer he was a carpenter-and every room constructed with an eye to the comfort and convenience of its expected mistress .- Kate's dowry consisted of a few hundred dollars, left her by an uncle, and which was to be hers at the age of eighteen, or on the eve of ber marriage. Kate thought the best use to put the money to would be to farnish the house, and so go at once to housekeeping, and Will agreed with most of your spare time."

Then came the all-important subject of select ions; for Kate had only a certain amount, and was anxious to lay it out to the best advantage. She had neither mother nor sister, but, fortunately, Aunt Sarah, a kind hearted, sensible woman, with no little experience in such matters, was on her annual visit to her brother's house, and she determined to avail herself to her counsel and assistance. The eld lady had been but a few days in the house, but her sharp, kindly eyes had been sufficiently observing; so she was not at all surprised when her niece said, with a slight blush : " I am going to be married next month,
