Editorial Correspondence.

Ottawa, May 1. 1869. we are inclined to leave for a time the dryer prosier work of a parliamentary reporter and indulge in something lighter. And first thoughts our pen tired of its wonted occupation relieves itself by the following, for which we claim no merit except its originality :- -

SPRING.

The spring has come! each wave of air is bearing The soft sweet voices that proclaim her here, While nature, on her ample breast, is wearing The gay green livery of the opening year.

Her voices, oh, how sweet! From glad birds, glancing Athwart each thicket, comes the tuneful song: While every brook, in the warm sun light dancing, And wood, and river, roll the strain along.

And modest flowers, our northern spring time flora, Erpand their petals, and, with perfume mild, Leden the breezes. Early bright aurora Comes, with celestial steeds, Hyperian's child.

All nature's pulses, as the spring descendeth, Beat with a livelier, quicker, throb the while;-And beauty springs, to hail its queen, where wendeth Her magic feet or beams her quickening smile.

So much for nature. Reminded of the interest ractical character, -speeches at the same time possessing more than ordinary merit-that we have ever listened to. Hon. Malcolm Cameron
