HONOUR THY FATHER .- Some persons, if they rise in life, are almost ashamed to own their parents if they are poor. Not so Archbishop Till otson. When he was Dean of Cantebury, he had a party of friends at his house, when a plain Yorkshireman came to the door and asked if John Tillotson lived there. The servants were about to order him from the door, when one of them went in and told the Dean that an old man ness on his own account, and he trusts, by strict atten-was inquiring for John Tillotson, and would tion to business, and the wants of his customers, genenot go away. He immediately went out, and rally, still to merit a continuance of their patronage. finding as he expected, that it was his father, said inpresence of the astonished servants of It. said inpresence of the astonished servants, " It is my beloved father !" He went on his knees and asked his blessing, and instantly intro duced him to his friends.

A reporter, in an article on the destitute poor, spoke of the great number of persons re-duced to poverty by the "mysterions decrees of Providence." His astonishment may be im-agined when he saw the printer had altered it to "the mysterious decrease of provisions." to "the mysterious decrease of provisions."
