> A Nevada newspaper tells a curious stor about a young man named McCall, a Scotchn y birth, and about twenty-three years a ho thus relates his history, He says that self and his sister became converts to the Mo Lake a short time, his sister, being told that the must marry some one, took it into her head that she would like to marry him-her own brother. He objected, and she went to Brigham about the matter, and was told that it was allowable for that she would marry no one else, and insisted upon her brother taking her as his wife. He The two most precious things on this side of now went to Brigham, believing his sister had not told him the truth, and was told that say man might marry any woman, the main thing being to increase and multiply. Finally the brother and sister were married after some Mormon form, and after the ceremony, the brother Some of the marriages heard about are pretty hard, but this is the worst one yet.
