QUA CURSUM VENTUS.

BY ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH. As ships, becalmed at eve, that lay With canvas drooping, side by side, Two towers of sail at dawn of day Are scarce, long leagues apart, described;

When fell the night, upsprung the breeze, And all the darkling hours they plied, Nor dreamt but each the self same seas By each was cleaving, side by side. E'en so-but why the tale reveal Of those whom, year by year unchanged,

Brief absence joined anew to feel, Astounded, soul from soul estranged? At dead of night their sails were filled, And onwerd each rejoicing steered :-Ah, neither blame, for neither willed, Or wist, what first with dawn appeared.

To veer, how vain! On, onward strain, Brave barks! In light, in darkness, too, Through wind and tide one compass guides, To that, and your own selves, be true. But O blithe breeze, and O great seas,

Though ne'er, that earliest parting past, On your wide plain they join again, Together lead them home at last. One port, methought, alike they sought, One purpose hold where'er they fare—

O bounding breeze, O rushing seas,

At last, at last, unite them there!
