Children dear you now are weeping. Sadly o'er the new made grave, Where lies one all lonely sleeping, Whom no power on earth could save. In an instant death has torn her From your happy home away, Angels pinions now have borne her To the realms of endless day. Children dear how keen the anguish That has pierced and torn thy hearts, Oh, how earthly joys do languish, When a cherished one departs. Sorrow, grief and desolation, Are around thy fireside now; Prayer will give you consolation, Strickened children humble bow.
