The Shepherd and the Lamb. BY DAVID BARKER. In the Scottish hills as a shepherd strolled,

On an eve with his ancient crook, He found a lamb that was chilled and young By the side of a purling brook.

From its mother's side might roam, He carried it up with a tender care To fold in his highland home. 'Mid the dreary night, o'er the cragged peak Through the winds and storms, and cold, The mother followed her captured lamb,

Once I had a lamb by its mother's side, It was artless, pure and mild, 'Twas the dearest lamb in my own dear flock,-

But a shepherd came when the sun grew low, By the path that has long been trod, And he carried my lamb thro' the mists of night,
To his fold in the mount of God.

And climb that mount by the shepherd's 'rack, To the fold where our lamb has gone
