Poetry. THE ADVENT SEASON.

HE COMES, NO ROYAL VESTURE WEARING. (Dein Konig kommt in niedern Hullen.)

He comes, no royal vesture wearing, An humble beast the Monarch bearing; Receive the King, Jerusalem! Go forth with palms, His triumph showing, With branches green the pathway strewing, And shout hosannas to His name.

O, Sovereign, by no host attended!
Strong Champion, by no spear defended
O, Prince of Peace, and David's Son! Thy throne, from whose approach forever The kings of earth Thy step would sever, Is by Thee, without battle, won.

Unto the empire Thou hast founded,
Though not of earth, or by earth bounded
All earthly realms shall subject be;
Forth into every land and nation,
Thy servants, armed with Thy salvation, March to prepare a way for Thee. And at Thy coming, clothed with power, The sullen storm forgets to lower, And waves grow calm beneath Thy tread The bonds by man's rebellion blighted,

And sin and death in fetters led O. Lord of grace and truth unending, And love, all reach of thought transcending, Revisit us, so sorely tried! Thine advent once again is needed To form anew Thy peace, unheeded By worldly haughtiness and pride.

O, let Thy light which ne'er shall vanish From earth the power of darkness banish The lurid flames of discord quell; That we, the thrones and people loyal,
As brethern 'neath Thy sceptre royal,
In Thy great Father's house may dwell.

The captain of one of the largest steamboats running on the Potomac was astonished one day lately, as his boat touched the landing at one of the riverside watering places not a great distance from Washington, to see all the guests assembled with their baggage ready to take passage to the city. On making inquiries as to the cause of this sudden exodus he soon discovered that thereby hung a tale. A cat's. It appears that the fare at the hotel had disagreed with the boarders, and not satisfied with complaining, they took French leave. A batch of dough had been prepared for the oven and placed on the table. A playful kitten thought it would be nice to run over it, it looked so snowy, warm, and tempting. Kitty tried it, and soon found her delicate little feet sinking in the dough. She struggled to escape, and, like Gov. Morton struggled to escape, and, like Gov. Morton in the stolen treaty business, only to sink deeper, and so, like young Lochinvar, went into the yeast. She never rose again, but the bread did.
