Poetry.

SOWING.
Are we sowing seeds of kindness?
They shall blossom bright ere long.
Are we sowing seeds of discord?
They shall ripen into wrong.
Are we sowing seeds of honor?
They shall bring forth golden grain.
Are we sowing seeds of falsehood?
We shall reap bitter pain.
Whatsoever our sowing be,
Reaping, we its fruits must see.

We can never be too careful
What the seed our hands shall sow.
Love from love is sure to ripen,
And to flourish at the harvest day.
Seeds of good or ill we scatter,
Heedlessly along our way;
But a good or evil fruit, it
Will be at the harvest day.
Whatsoever our sowing be,
Reaping, we its fruits must see.

Select Tale.

THE FIRST OFFENCE.
In the cheerful dining-room of my friend Stephenson a select party was assembled to celebrate his birthday. A very animated discussion had been carried on for some time as to whether the first deviation from integrity should be treated with severity or leniency. Various were the arguments brought forward to support them.
The majority appeared to lean to the idea of "crush all offences in the bud," and warmly heated gentlemen exclaimed:—"Depend upon it, more young people are lost to society from the first violation being treated with injudicious severity than from the contrary extreme. Not that I would pass over the slightest deviation from integrity, either in word or deed, but would rather be mistaken kindness; but, on the other hand, neither would I punish with severity an offence committed, perhaps under the influence of temptation—temptation, too, that we ourselves may have thoughtlessly placed in the way. In such a case, I am of opinion, the offender ought to be treated with leniency." There is truth in what you say," remarked our benevolent host, who had hitherto taken no part in the conversation, "and it reminds me of a circumstance that occurred in the earlier part of my life, which may serve to illustrate the subject you have been discussing."
"In the outset of my business career," said he, "I took into my employment a young man as under clerk; according to a rule I had laid down, whenever a stranger entered my service his first week was to be devoted to his general training, and possible insufficient time had been given to form a correct estimate of his character.
This young man, whom I shall call Smith, was of a respectable family. He had lost his father, and had a mother and sisters in need of his assistance. He was a good man, and I had been a short time in my employment, it happened that my confidential clerk, whose duty it was to receive money from the bank for the payment of wages, being prevented by an unforeseen circumstance from attending at a particular time, the sum required by me was not paid, and after he had been a short time in my
