FATHER'S GROWING OLD. Our father's growing old, John!
His eyes are growing dim,
And years are on his shoulders lain,

A heavy weight for him.

And you and I are young and hale, And each a stalwart man, And we must make his load as light And easy as we can. He used to take the brunt, John!

At cradle and at plow,
And carned our porridge by the sweat
That trickled down his brow; Yet never heard we him complain Whate'er his toil might be, Nor wanted e'er a welcome seat Upon his solid knee. And when our boy-strength came, John ! And sturdy grew each limb, He brought us to the yellow field To share the toil with him;

But he went foremost in the swarth, Tossing aside the grain,
Just like the plough that heaves the sod, Or ships that shear the main. Now we must lead the van, John! Through weather foul and fair, And let the old man read and doze,

And tilt his easy chair; And he'll not mind it, John, you know At eve to tell us o'er Those brave old days of British times, Our grandsires and the war. I heard you speak of ma'am, John

The ard you speak of ma'am, John!

'Tis gospel what you say,
That caring for the like of us
Has turned her hair so gray!
Yet, John, I do remember well
When neighbors called her vain,
And when her hair was long and like A-gleaming sheaf of grain. She had a buxom arm, John

Whene'er with wilful step our feet
The path forbidden trod;
But to the heaven of her eye We never looked in vain, And evermore our yielding cry Brought down the tears like rain.

But that is long agene, John!
And we are what we are,
And little heed we day by day,
Her fading cheek and hair; And when beneath her faithful breast The tides no longer stir, 'Tis then, John, we the most shall feel We have no friend like her.

His eyes are getting dim,
And mother's treading softly down
The deep descent with him;

Yes, father's growing old, John

SLAVIN FREE.—For a day or two a rumor has been current that Patrick Slavin, who was captured by Mr. Vavasour, of Fredericton, at Vanceboro, Maine, last week, and by him handed over to the American authorities, was again free, and there seems little reason to doubt but such is the fact. The first question to an applicant for his extradition would be "What offence has he committed?" to which the reply could only be "Escaped from the penitentiary in which he was serving out a life term for complicity in a murder from the penitentiary in which he was serving out a life term for complicity in a murder committed fourteen years ago." Such an offence, however, does not come under the Extradition Treaty, and the plea that he is a murderer would scarcely hold good to secure his retention, seeing that he was arrested, tried, convicted, and sentenced for that crime. There are doubtless many who will be glad to know that he is not to be brought back, but that an opportunity will be afforded him but that an opportunity will be afforded him to enter upon some business pursuit where his past history is unknown, in which he may develope into a good and useful member of society. Should this result be brought about few will regret that he has escaped. He was scarcely more than a child when concerned intirely under the influence of his father, and
