in which he congratulated Parliament on the Union of that Province with the Dominion. The Dominion reply was seconded by Carter. MacKenzie, in an able address, reviewed the contents of the speech, which he termed a failure, containing few of the important questions which were to be discussed by Parliament There was no allusion made to the promise made by Lange-An act to amend the law to regulate the vin for deepening the canal to Lake St. Peter; no mention of the Supreme Court bill, Controverted Elections act, or the late recall of Governor Archibald; and nothing about the Treaty of Washington. In fact it was a meagre bill of fare. He charged the Government with having called and Parliament together at such a late season for interested motives and not for the welfare of the An act to authorize the Woodstock Me- Dominion. He referred to the omission from the chanics' Institute to sell and convey the real saddress of any reference to "Better Terms" for New Brunswick, and charged the Government with having given rise to the demand by estab-An act in further amendment of the law lishing a precedent for it in the case of Nova Scotia. He accused Sir John A. Macdonald with sacrificing the interests of the Dominion at Wash. ington. He referred to the speech of Howe at the Young Men's Christian Association at Ottawa, and condemned it as unjustifiable. The only point upon which he agreed with the Government was the proposed improvement in navigation.

Hinks demurred from the opinion expressed An act relating to the payment of damages | by Mackenzie respecting the construction of the Pacific Railway, and contended that the work the delay in calling the Session together he explained it was caused by the differences which An act in amendment of an act to incorpo- were two aspects of it to be considered, the merits of the Treaty itself, which would have to be An act in addition to an act to incorporate dealt with by Parliament, and the question of the responsibility of the Canadian Government. Holton protested against the position assumed by Hinks that the Canadian representative in the Commission should be bound by instructions from any other quarter than Canada. He could not see how the difficulties respecting the Treaty between Great Britain and the United States could have caused delay in calling the Session ogether, since these difficulties had arisen since he month of February, when Parliament should Macdougall took the same ground with respect to the ratification of the Treaty that he had assumed from the outset, and which was published in all the papers of the Dominion at the time, namely, that if the Parliament of Great Britain, and the United States should ratify the Treaty, nothing was left for Canada to do but accept it unless she were prepared to sever her connection with Great Britain.

The House then rose for recess.

After the recess, Mr. Macdougall resumed the lebate. He said that he would not discuss the uestion of constitutionality of the Treaty at the resent time. The Parliament was assembled to enact the laws necessary in the interests of the eople.
