ago, in a certain popular town in the fine the State know from sad experience in early life. We will call the names of these boys William and James. One VICTORIA ISOTEL, day William purchased a jew's-harp from James, price eight cents, to be paid for on the following Saturday, equal to three days' credit. At the time agreed upon James called for his pay, but an extension of the credit was asked for three days, and granted. At this latter day the money was once more called for, when the promiser and promisee (William told) James) that if he ever dared to call for that money he would get, instead there- British North America. of, a right sound thrashing. That debt was never paid. It was hard for James, for though a small sum, it was all that James could call his own in "this wide, and that was small enough, and whether pennies or pounds, few or many, one loses all he has it is the same.

Years have passed, and where are those boys now? James is a respected and honorable merchant in a certain city, and is called rich, if that is any honor. And William? He is a pauper on the town. Within a week or two they met, but oh, how different their circumstances. Indeed, those who knew the facts felt that SPECIAL DEPOSITS, of New Stock, personal deed, those who knew the facts felt that an evil beginning leads to a bad ending, and the dishonest boy foretells the dishonest man.
