Wide open is its eye; And happy is the scarlet vine, That runs along the dark green pine, As if to reach the sky. This afternoon, down by the brook. A bright-eyed squirrel stooped and took A dozen little drinks; Some nuts were lying at my feet.

He looked as if he thought them swe And gave some knowing winks. Just then a little leaf quite brown Into the brook came rustling down, And sailed off like a ship; The squirrel gave his tail a whisk, Then made a funny sideways-frisk, And left me with a skip.

RUSSIAN THIEVES.—The French Journa des Debats quotes a letter, dated Nijui-Novgorod, of the 10th ult., in which an account is given of a daring robbery perpetrated by thieves at that place. The correspondent says:—"On the 3rd of September, at 7 o'clock, the great theatre, which contains 1000 persons, was full. The piece represented was a favorite one, entitled 'Crime and its Punishment.' Among those present were the leading military and civil officers, the head of the police, and a large number of police officers. While the first act was being played. and the attention of the spectators was placed on the stage, a report was suddenly heard, a slight smoke filled the upper part of the theatre, and a cry of 'fire' was raised.—
Everybody rushed to the doors, but only one was open. Terror became general when this was discovered. The crowd was enormous, and persons were thrown down and trampled upon.
