

Miscellaneous.

HINTS TO YOUNG MEN.—After all, in looking out for a wife, a man must consider how she will show at the festival, rather than at parties. You can learn so much of literary and artistic tastes, the favorite books that are already in hand, the music that is regularly studied and sung, kind of associations and the general order of tastes. It is by far the best way of getting up a flirtation, which if not unpleasantly done under parental eyes, are kindly and benign. Love-making is an unbecomingly pleasant element for the winter nights. You may talk of the perils of young men when they come up to town; but there is no better safeguard than giving such young fellows the associations of home and sweet woman. Parents make an immense mistake in taking too severely momentary a view of a young fellow's prospects. I never knew a young fellow under ever so dark a cloud, who with purpose and ability, could not work his way out into the sunlight. Better even the long engagement, or the early marriage, than many other suppositions that might be put. —Cor. London Society.

A Meriden man returning from the "club" a few nights ago, got into the wrong boat and had just pulled off his boots preparatory to seeking his little bed, when the proprietor appeared, and with some difficulty convinced him. When they arrived the inebriated individual was still so befuddled that he insisted that his friend (who by the way is a strict temperance man), should be sent to bed; assured him he would never say a word about his being "in-toasted"; pointed out to him the evils of intemperance; depicted the sorrow of his wife if he should ever know of his condition; begged him never to touch another drop of liquor, and even went so far as to produce a bill for goods from one of our merchants, which he insisted was a temperance pledge, and with tears upon his face, he signed it, promising to stand by him through "thick and thin" if he would do so. It is needless to say that the temperance man didn't sign. —Exchange.

FISK'S FIRST MISTAKE.—Fisk used to tell about his first mistake in life. Said the Colonel, "When I was a little boy on the Vermont farm, my father took me up to the stable." Said he, "I remember the stable window is pretty high for a boy, but you think you could take this shovel and clean the stable?" "I don't know, pop," said James, "I never have done it." "Well, my boy, if you will do it this morning, I'll give you this bright silver dollar," said his father, putting him on the head, while he held the silver dollar before his eyes. "Good," said James, "I'll try," and he went to work. He tugged, and pulled, and lifted, and puffed; and finally, it was done, and his father gave him the first silver dollar, saying, "That's right James, you did it splendidly, and now I find you can do it so nicely. I shall have you do it every morning this winter."

That the antiquity of newspapers in Rome, so far as the idea is concerned, goes as far back as more than several centuries before the Christian era, is a fact fully established. But a still greater age for newspaper journalism is claimed by the Chinese. They themselves affirm that in their empire an official gazette was published many centuries before the building of Rome. Much credit would not be given to their claims of newspaper antiquity did they stand alone, but they are supported by the Roman historians, who on various occasions quote the Acta Diurna, or as they were called the Daily Advertisers of China. The Chinese also affirm that they discovered and employed printing in the first century; but knowing with what fables and fictions their chronology abounds, we are bound to believe this in the absence of any corroborative evidence.

Any and every farmer, who by the use of his reasoning powers, is enabled to raise one bushel of corn per acre more than he has hitherto done, by improved methods, is a scientific farmer, however much he may disown the name; and not only has he done a good thing for himself, but the world at large, to some extent, better for his efforts and success; his mission, as a man, has been to that extent fulfilled, and he will leave the world better than he found it. —Health and Home.

We have tidings from Boston of a clergyman of Massachusetts, who, on taking up a note which he found, when he opened the bible, he read that brother A requested the prayers of the church, that the loss of his wife might be blessed to him, etc. The preacher prayed most fervently. To his amazement and mortification, he found that the note had lain in the pulpit a year, and that the bereaved gentleman was on this Sabbath sitting with a new wife in the congregation.

"What would make a good leading article for me to-morrow?" asked a wicked editor of a wit. "A halter," was the sententious reply.
