Poetry. MY ROSE. The night is cold, the moon is ringed

With hazy prophecy of snow, And frozen lies the outer world;

But in my heart is summer glow.

The fire burns low, the light is dim;

I hear late footsteps hurrying by,

For all the cold and shadowy room

Steeped in the sunlight of the south,

Red-petaled, sweet, and velvet soft,

Yet lingering upon my mouth.

Can enter into humblest room

Where such a Rose but comes to touch

And thrill a lifetime with its bloom.
