Poetry.

A Lay of Olden Time.

One morning of the first sad day,

Sat in the shade of Eden's wall-

She, blushing in her fig leaf suit

For the chaste garb of old;

He, sighing over the bitter fruit

Behind him, smiling in the morn,

Before them, wild with rock and thorn,

They heard the air above them fanned,

And lo! they saw before them stand

"Arise," he said, "why look behind, When hope is all before,

And patient hand and willing mind,

"I leave with you a spell whose power

And call around you fruit and flower As fair as Eden had.

The curse from off your soil;

Your loss a gain through toil.

To labor as to play."

The angel passed away.

Obedient to the word.

A garden of the Lord!

The thorn tree cast its evil fruit

Your very doom shall seem a gift-

"Go! cheerful as you humming bees,

While glimmering over Eden's trees,

The pilgrims of the world went forth

And blushed with plum and pear,

Select Tale.

Miss Thorne's Fortune Told.

Cissy Thorne was sitting at her toilet-

table, skipping a novel while her maid

And found where'er they tilled the earth

"I clothe your hands with power to lift

Your loss may yet restore?

Can make the desert glad,

For Eden's grapes of gold.

Their forfeit garden lay;

The desert stretched away.

A light step on the sward,

The angel of the Lord!

Poor Adam and his bride

We have reliable information that a very marked reaction has taken place in the value of timber built ships; there is a considerable demand for them, and English owners who, two or three years ago, imagined they were going to be ruined, now wont sell their vessels. The market value of wooden ships has so far advanced that it is said some hundreds of pounds more may be had for first-class property of this kind that ever was imagined would be the case. Several large clippers which were lying in Liverpool docks were purchased a short time ago by Tyne shipowners at comparatively low rates; and these have been run so successfully in certain trades against the screw steamers as to have caused a revival of trade in wooden ships.-The wooden fleet of the Tyne has hitherto Items foreign & Local. been principally employed in bringing Spanish Esparto grass for the paper mills, and in difficulty in getting handy little ships to carry small parcels and goods from our northern ports.
