OUR OWN.

If I had known in the morning How wearily all the day The words unkind would trouble my mind That I said when you went away, I had been more careful darling, Nor given you needless pain; But we vex our own with look and tone We may never take back again,

For though in the quiet evening You may give me the kiss of peace. Yet it well might be that never for me The pain of the heart should cease! How many go forth at morning Who never come home at night! And hearts have broken for harsh wo spoken, That sorrow can ne'er set right.

We have careful thought for the stranger, And smile for the some-time guests; But oft for our own the bitter tone, Though we love our own the best. Ah! lips with the curve impatient, Ah! brow with the shade of scorn, Twere a cruel fate were the night too late To undo the work of morn!

A Humane Society has been organized in New York, with objects similar to the Royal Humane Society of England, to save human lives from accident and to take care of the wounded. It will have abundant work, and may be vastly useful.

The total abstainers in England are about to employ a new weapon in their warfare against the vice of intoxication. They propose issuing a weekly comic paper, advocating the cause of temperance and ridiculing drunkards and the vendors of intoxicating drinks. The idea in itself is comic enough. The little Quaker village of New Sharon, down in Mahaska County, Iowa, has a strict example in the liquor traffic. They have incorporated the town a mile square, and raised the license for the sale of liquor to $1,100. A man in Bowling Green, Ky., on resetting an old gate-post lately found a jar under it containing $2000 in gold.
