Poetry. A SECRET.

It is your secret and mine, love! Ah me! how the dreary rain, With a slow persistence all day long Dripped on the window pane! The chamber was weird with shadows, And dark with the deepening gloom, Where you in your royal womanhood Lay waiting for the tomb!

In its cold and still repose! O, paler than yonder carven saint, And calm as the angels are, RE-OPENED THIS DAY. You seemed so near me, my beloved, Yet were, alas, so far! I do not know if I wept, love, But my soul rose up and said: "My heart shall speak unto her heart, Though here she is lying—dead!

will give her a last love-token

That shall be to her a sign

In the dark grave-or beyond it!-Of this deathless love of mine." So I sought me a little scroll, love, And thereon in eager haste, Lest another's eye should read them, Some mystic words I traced. Then close in your clasped fingers, Close in your waxen hand, I placed the scroll as an amulet,

Sure you would understand!

The secret of your's and mine, love! Only we two may know What words shone clear in the darkness Of your grave so green and low. But if, when we meet hereafter, In the dawn of a fairer day, You whisper those mystical words, love, It is all I would have you say!
