General News.

FOLLOWING A MURDERER.—A Japanese named Ichinashi, seven years ago, had killed in Yedo with a fellow countryman, a quarrel which ended in blood. He had sons, who at the time of his death were respectively seventeen and fourteen years of age. According to the ancient customs of Japan, the widow and two sons applied to their daimio for permission to search for the murderer of the father, and to revenge his death if successful in their search. The permission was granted, and the youths started on their mission. For six years they travelled over the country without finding any trace of the murderer; but at length they learned that he had become a priest and was residing in a certain temple in Yedo. Thither they repaired only to learn that he had gone to Kyoto. For a year long they followed the trail they had struck, frequently hearing of their search under various assumed names—sometimes as priest and sometimes as a beggar. At last, by mere chance, the young men, after seven years fruitless waiting, a few weeks ago came to a town named Bingo Fanyama, where, in the ranks of some soldiers who were drilling in a field they recognized their long sought-for murderer. The daimio's brother went up to the commanding officer, and after telling the story pointed out the man and requested permission to kill him.
The officer refused, saying the matter was very serious; that he could not oblige him, but only a few days before the Government had issued a notification forbidding any one from performing such a deed. The daimio upon himself the right to avenge bloodshed, it was a sad blow to the young men, we told, especially as the murderer deserted and made good his escape while the matter was under discussion; but he was consoled by the promise that the Government would take cognizance of the offence and meet justice to the offender. Placably have been posted on the notice boards all over Japan, offering a reward for the arrest of the fugitive criminal, and the authorities have taken other means for securing his capture. This is no romance, but a recent incident of actual occurrence. The Forbes says that the notices offering a reward for the apprehension of the murderer, set forth the whole story of the protracted pursuit made by the youthful avengers, and that they are read with great interest every day.

In Sweden the first time that a man appears intoxicated in a public place he is condemned to a fine of about twenty shillings—the second time to a fine of twenty-five shillings. The third and fourth time not only does the offender pay a large fine, but loses his rights as an elector, and on Sunday he is compelled to stand in the pillory in front of his parish church. The fifth time the punishment is six months imprisonment with hard labor.

A new and important fact in silk culture has been developed by the Acclimation Society in France, namely, that silk of varied color can be produced by feeding the silks worm on different leaves of the mulberry tree.
The leaves of the mulberry tree, when fed on, produce a silk of magnificent red color. Lettuce has been found to produce an emerald green colored silk.

THE OLDEST SOLDIER IN THE WORLD.
—The 18th Royal Irish has the honor of possessing the oldest soldier in the British Army, or perhaps in the world, in the person of Colonel Sir John Forbes Fitzgerald, G. C. B., the senior General of the army, and a veteran of 80 years service, his first commission as ensign bearing date the 29th October, 1793. At the early age of 18 this distinguished officer was a Major, having obtained the first commission when he was eight years old; in six months, and 10 days after he was a captain, and in the 18th regiment 4th, as a captain of 7 years standing at the age of 16. Sir John has been a full General for the last 10 years, and Colonel of the 18th Royal Irish for the last 15 years. He commanded a Light Infantry regiment at the battle of Salamanka, and a Brigade at the Pyrenees in 1813 as Lieutenant-Colonel.

HOP PAPER—A VALUABLE NEW IN-VENTION.—A discovery has been made by a French firm of paper manufacturers, which seems likely to interest hop growers. At the last general assembly of French paper makers, M. St. Julien, President of the hop growers, submitted some samples of a new textile fabric for the Congress. The high price of hops has for some time past given rise to serious efforts to utilize the leaves of the hop plant for vegetable fibres. This wool, straw, crape, gauze, alous, alous, alous and various other vegetable products have been pressed into the service, but have not proved entirely satisfactory. Among other drawbacks the fibres obtained from these are soft, and not sufficiently supple. Such faults do not exist in the new product, which has hitherto been regarded as useless, namely, the textile sheath of the hop stalk. By removing this outer skin, and subjecting it to a certain chemical process, a textile substance possessing the qualities which makes rags so valuable in paper making, length, suppleness, and delicacy of texture, has been produced. The invention is patented, and further progress of the hop stalk, and with them also in the beginning while the soil is fresh and new to receive the seed. Will the seed spring up more readily than if planted after the soil is hardened by many storms.

A BEAUTIFUL REPLY.—A little girl was asked by her father how great she thought God was; to which she replied with admirable readiness: "He is so great the heavens cannot contain him; and yet so kindly condescending as to dwell in my little heart."

A poor drunken loafer was picked up in the streets by the watchman, when the following decision was made: "There is no sense in his head, no sense in his pocket, and a powerful scent in his breath; he was of course sent to the watch house.

whole of a man's real character at once.

greatest simplicity.

Poetry.

To-Day and To-Morrow.

If fortune with a smiling face, Strews roses on our way, When shall we stop to pick them up?
To-day, my love—today.

But should she frown with face of care,
And talk of coming sorrow, When shall we grieve, if grieve we must?
To-morrow, love—to-morrow.

If those who've wronged us own their faults,
And kindly pray,
When shall we listen and forgive?
To-day, my love—today.

But in stern justice urge rebuke, And warn from memory borrow,
When shall we chide—if chide we dare?
To-morrow, love—to-morrow.

If, veiled, estranged, should once again Her silent smile display, When shall we smile and say "I love"?
To-day, my love—today.

But if she should indulge regret, Or dwell with by-gone sorrow, When shall we weep—if weep we must?
To-morrow, love—to-morrow.

For virtuous acts and harmless joys The mind will not stay; We've always time to welcome them,
To-day, my love—today.

But care, resentment, angry words, Come far too late, if they appear,
To-morrow, love—to-morrow.

Select Tale.

The Origin of Philopena.

There was once a beautiful princess who had a great fondness for almonds, and ate them constantly, but nothing would induce her to marry, and in order to rid herself of her suitors, of whom there were a great number, she invented the following device:—

To every prince who sought her hand, she presented half of a double almond, while she ate the other half, and said:—
"If your lordship can succeed in getting me to take anything from your hand before I say the words 'I remember,' but I am ready to become your bride.
But if, on the contrary, you receive anything from me without thinking to speak these words, then you must agree to have your hair shaven entirely off your head and leave the kingdom."

This, however, was an artful stratagem, for, according to the court custom, no one dare to hand anything directly to the princess, but first to the court lady, who then offered it to her. But, of course, on the other hand, the princess desired to give or take anything—who could refuse her?
So it was useless for suitors to make the trial, for when they seemed likely to be successful, and had diverted the princess so that she was about to take something from her, the court lady always stepped up between, and spoiled the best laid plan.

When the princess wished to dispose of one of them, she would appear so charming and encouraging to him, that he would be entirely fascinated, and when he sat at her feet, overcome with joy, then she would seize upon anything near her, as though by accident: "Take this as a remembrance of me," and when he had it in his hands, before he could think or speak the necessary words, there would spring out at him a frog, or a hornet, or a bat, and so startle him that he would flee the words. Then, upon the spot, he was shaven, and never heard of again.

This went on for some years, and in all the places of the other kingdoms the princess were wise. Thus it came to be the custom from that time.

Finally it happened that a foreign prince came upon some peculiar business, and by accident saw the princess. He thought her very beautiful, and at once perceived the stratagem. A friendly little old man had given him an ap-
